HAPGOOD Says:

Northcliffe and Lloyd George Are Engaged in Exciting Struggle for Power in British Politics

—By NORMAN HAPGOOD—

Staff Correspondent of Boston American

Washington, July 30.—Sometimes the matters Washington excites itself about from day to day have significance, and sometimes they pass with the night and are heard of nevermore.

NORMAN HAPGOOD

Today the principal tremor in journalistic circles is caused by the drama in which Lord Northcliffe, Lloyd George, Lord Curzon and King George are on the stage at the moment, but in which the real actors are Lord Northcliffe and the Prime Minister, the other two being staged for temporary parts.

Between Northcliffe and Lloyd George a genuine contest of wits and power has been going on since a brief time after the Welsh wizard, with the help of Britain's most extensive journalist, acquired the lead in the politics of Europe.

This fight for power has little to do with any difference of opinion upon this question or upon that, of current national or international controversy. It is a plain wrestling for the control of English opinion and for the occupation of the seats of the mighty.

The contestants are hard, skilful fighters, and the question of which comes out on top will have a serious bearing on the immediate future of British politics.

OVERTHROW OF ASQUITH.

Their relations began when Asquith was Prime Minister. Lord Northcliffe was anxious to get Asquith out of office and Mr. Lloyd George was eager to become Prime Minister himself.

Lloyd George was a member of Mr. Asquith's Cabinet, but that did not embarrass him at all in planning with the powerful publisher the overthrow of his chief. The two together were able soon to make Mr. Asquith's government impossible.

But Lloyd George is a different kind of politician from Asquith. He seems to land on his feet with entirely feline accuracy.

Two years ago practically everybody expected to see the Prime Minister by this time go over to the labor party and lead it. Doubtless he himself looked upon that course as probable. Instead of that he was led, by the tactics of remaining in power, to clash with the labor elements. As soon as this clash became inevitable he watched his moment, and with unerring certainty filled the public mind with the fear that his labor opponents were Bolshevik.

In his treatment of his Tory allies he has been equally shrewd. He has kept a position from which he could desert them at any moment, on one or another big issue, and they know that if he deserted them they could not govern a month.

The Irish question has been so bungled that it would have thrown any other leader out of power, but instead of destroying Lloyd George it may be settled and marked down as one of his greatest triumphs.

LLOYD GEORGE'S STRENGTH.

The British empire is surrounded by pitfalls, stretching from the coal mines of Wales to the farthest stretches of India. The British people do not believe Lloyd George has any principles, but they do believe that in dodging rocks and steering through whirlpools he is without a peer.

Lord Northcliffe has attacked Lloyd George vigorously many times. The small Welshman has held his peace, with his extraordinary patience, and bided his time.

For some reason, fully known to his own instinct alone, the Prime Minister has decided that the moment has come for a show-down.

He has gone out of his way to invite a test of strength. He has recently seemed to delight in making his methods raw and his language jeering, so that there could be no doubt that a test of strength was on.

If Northcliffe is able to shake Lloyd George he will have the glory of doing what no one else has done. He will have gotten the better of the champion catch-as-catch-can politician of the Cosmos.

Lloyd George never worries.

Woman Is Missing From Liner

PASSENGER BELIEVED SUICIDE

Officials Fear "Mary Oates" Leaped Into Sea From Providence Ship

Providence, July 30.—A woman signing herself as Mary Oates, a passenger on the Bay State line's Georgia, which docked today, is believed to have committed suicide by leaping overboard on the trip from New York.

She failed to leave the ship with other passengers, and it was later discovered that her stateroom was deserted and the bed apparently had not been occupied.

A handbag found in the stateroom contained a notebook in which was written a request to notify Sarah Oates of Huntington, L. I., in case of accident. There was also a pocketbook containing 87 cents, and a handkerchief marked with the initial "M." The police were notified and began an investigation.

FINES FOR MAN ARRESTED IN FRANKLIN PARK RAID

Greenfield, July 30.—James Jenkins, alias Andrew Sullivan, of Hartford, arrested in the raid conducted by J. Frank Chase of the Watch and Ward Society at Franklin Park during the Short Ship Circuit races, was found guilty of striking Deputy Sheriff M. J. Carroll and was fined $25 in the local court. He was also found guilty of being present during unlawful pool selling and was fined $100.

McCarthy Named as General Dry Agent

Washington, July 30.—William J. McCarthy of Boston today was appointed by Commissioner of Revenue Blair as a general prohibition agent.

McCarthy becomes a member of the mobile force organized by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes for special duty.

The force has its headquarters in Washington and is detailed from time to time for investigations in the field. Daniel J. Gantt, formerly prohibition supervisor at Atlanta, Ga., today was named assistant prohibition field supervisor. Gantt will confine his operation to Southeastern territory.

30 BARRELS OF WHISKEY STOLEN IN STREET

New York, July 30.—Thirty barrels of imported whiskey were stolen today in broad daylight at Eleventh avenue and Fiftieth street by a party of four armed men. The robbers boarded a truck and forced the driver to vacate, warning him that he would be shot by a lookout if he tried to give the alarm. The driver, George Salvatone, was left in the street and the truck ambled on in charge of the four robbers.

CHARLESTOWN MAN HELD ON AUTO THEFT CHARGE

Albert J. Smith of Chapman street, Charlestown, was found guilty in Charlestown Court of unlawfully appropriating an automobile, the property of James J. Waldron of Arlington. Waldron left the machine at the corner of Main and School streets, Charlestown. It was later recovered by Smith, who was given six months in the House of Correction, appealed, and was held in $500 bail.

SALVATION ARMY MAN ENDS LIFE

Captain Frank M. Sulzer Ends Life in Basement of People's Palace

Captain Frank M. Sulzer, fifty-one years old, of No. 176 Columbia road, Dorchester, one of the most prominent members of the Salvation Army, committed suicide today in the basement of the People's Palace, Washington and East Brookline streets, by firing a shot from a thirty-two-calibre revolver into his brain.

His body was discovered by Colonel McKenzie, a Salvation Army official. The revolver was near by.

According to Salvation Army officers, Captain Sulzer has been in ill health and recently underwent two operations. For several months he has been in charge of the fresh air camp of the Army at Canton and today requested his chauffeur to drive him to Boston, as he thought he would feel much better by visiting the city.

Arriving at the People's Palace, which is conducted by the Salvation Army, he talked with several attaches of the place and then went to the basement. A few minutes later the report of the shot, which ended his life was heard through the building. Colonel McKenzie was the first to trace the shot and stumbled over the body of Captain Sulzer.

FORMERLY A SALESMAN.

Prior to joining the Salvation Army seventeen years ago, Captain Sulzer was a traveling salesman. He was a prominent member of the Masons, Elks and other fraternal organizations.

He was separated from his wife a number of years.

A daughter by their marriage, Ruth, twenty-three years old, was stricken with tuberculosis last December and has been at a sanitarium in Search. Her illness caused Captain Sulzer much worry.

During the drive for funds for the carrying on of the work of the Salvation Army, Captain Sulzer was an indefatigable workers. He was a prominent figure at mass meetings conducted by the Army and often led in prayer meetings.

CAMP DEVENS WORKER.

During the war he gave unstintingly of his time to welfare work. He visited Camp Devens many times and offered encouragement to the soldier boys. One of his favorite poems is "Crossing the Bar," by Tennyson, which he frequently quoted this verse:

Sunset and evening star
And one clear call for me
And may there be no moaning at the bar
When I put out to sea.

Mounted Policemen Charge Bank Crowd

Scene in Front of Boston Five Cents Savings Bank Today When Anxious Depositors Became Riotous.

POLICE ARE SWEPT OFF FEET BY RIOTERS

Reinforcements Restore Order and Depositors' Demands Are Easily Met

In one of the most riotous scenes that has been witnessed since the days of the Ponzi crash, depositors of the Boston Five Cent Savings Bank today ran amuck in School street.

Screaming curses and demands in broken English, Italian and Yiddish, hundreds of excited men and women, blocked the street, carrying six patrolmen off their feet, and surged into the bank quarters.

These crowd fought and cursed the policemen, striking at them with their fists while the women shrieked hysterically and some of them fainted.

Women bodies not where their fists landed. One large woman rushed up to Traffic Officer Clarence Hughes and, before he knew what she was about, struck him a smart blow on the jaw. The crowd grinned and an officer led her across the street and told her to calm herself and go home. She did. Patrolman Oliver Brennan of Station 1 received a painful injury to his foot when it was stepped on by a mounted officer at home.

The business of paying off depositors started yesterday when the Five Cents on the bank and which was resumed at opening time today, was passed temporarily.

TRAFFIC HELD UP.

Additional police were secured from Divisions 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 15. Entrance into School street from City Turn Over.

THREE GENERALS SURRENDER TO IRISH COURT

Macready, Cameron and Strickland Yield—Sinn Feiners Released

By International News Service

Dublin, July 30.—General Sir Nevil Macready, commander-in-chief of the British troops in Ireland, General Cameron and General Strickland, for whom an Irish supreme court writ was issued yesterday, surrendered to the court today. Simultaneously the court ordered the release of two Sinn Fein prisoners who were under death sentence pending an appeal of their cases.

The writ calling for the appearance or arrest of the three British officers grew out of habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of the Sinn Feiners. The three officers had been ordered prosecuted but the military authorities, it is alleged, failed to obey the court order.

RIOTOUS SCENES AS DEPOSITORS MOB FIVE CENT SAVINGS BANK

POLICEMEN FOUGHT BY CROWD

The doors were cut off by the officers. Extra police were also assigned to City Hall to prevent entrance here.

There was plenty of money on hand, however, and after a comparative quiet had been restored the work of meeting the demands of the depositors was again resumed. President William E. Hann stated that the bank had refused offers of loans amounting to $1,000,000 made by other banks, and that they could continue to meet the run indefinitely.

The bank closed at 2 o'clock, at which time, according to President Hann, $50,000 had been paid out to 7,000 depositors since the opening today. Enough fifty deposits were still awaiting $5,000.

DISPERSED QUIETLY.

As soon as the bank was closed the crowd began to disperse without trouble and it is hoped there will be no disorder tonight. The police said no motions or protest looking had been received and that there is no serious injury.

Mr. Hann, after standing in line for hours secured his money and is to stand in the other side of the bank and redeposited it. The fund in the cashier has as soon as the run money is for hand she realized how badly she had been.

The following statement was issued by President Hann:

"We will continue paying indefinitely and will take care of all our depositors. We have plenty of money and all our depositors all our regular hours. We don't mind the run and we don't like to see the poor people in a run."

BANKS FOURTH'S RUN.

Many persons to whom we have advanced loans have offered to take their loans up but we have refused in every case.

To the years since this bank has been organized we have had four runs. In 1870 out of a capitalization of $2,000,000 we paid out $6,000,000. We had runs again in 1893 and 1907. We have met all these emergencies and we will meet this one."

Traffic in Bowdoin street was held up as it was impossible for even an automobile to get through. Extra mounted police officers were rushed to the scene and began splitting up the crowd and scattering it in all directions.

Riding abreast on the sidewalk, the policemen pushed the crowds into City Hall avenue, Court street, Tremont street and down to Washington street, impervious to the curses and blows aimed at them. Many were the chief residents, some of them fairly refusing to move, and at last the officers were forced to dismount in order to compel them to leave.

In a comparatively short time the street and bank were cleared, order restored and the work of paying off the depositors resumed.

A short time previously a father and son had been taken from the line in front of the bank for using profane language, and removed to the City Hall avenue station. After being reprimanded they were allowed to go.

Deputy Superintendent of Police Thomas C. Evans, acting superintendent during the absence of Superintendent Crowley, later issued a statement in which he said:

"I am satisfied that some malicious secret force is at work spreading propaganda among the foreign element and getting them to cause a run on the bank and withdraw their savings."

OFFICERS GUARD BANK.

The crowd is diminishing every minute and the lines, particularly in the North End, have become convinced that the bank is perfectly safe.

In the meantime two mounted officers and a number of other patrolmen will be kept on duty at the bank for the protection of everyone and to maintain order.

"We have in our possession proof positive right that the run was started by some malicious force and still have the matter under investigation."

President Wilmot R. Evans, shortly after the opening of the bank, had stated that the institution was perfectly capable of meeting the run and that an offer of a loan of $5,000,000 made by other banks, had been refused. He said the bank paid out $250,000 during the run yesterday.

Despite the reassuring statement of Deputy Superintendent of Police Evans, crowds continued to linger in Scollay square and Court police had great difficulty in dispersing them. Even when two automobiles were sent down the street two abreast the united men and women refused to leave the sidewalk.

SOME ARRESTS MADE.

At 12 o'clock, with the crowd outside but little thinned, the doors of the bank closed. Paying off continued, however, and when the last depositor saw left. The police said no motions or protest looking had been received and that there is no serious injuries.

Mr. Hann, after standing in line for hours secured his money and is to stand in the other side of the bank and redeposited it. The fund in the cashier has as soon as she got the money in her hand she realized how badly she had been.

Riga, July 30.—Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison of Baltimore, has been freed by the Soviet Government in Russia. Her release was secured by United States consular Joseph I. France of Maryland.

Mrs. Harrison and Senator France have arrived here from Russia. Both are well and in excellent health. Their weeks since her imprisonment in Russia but is very cheerful. Senator France said that the great difficulty prevailing upon the Soviet Government to release Mrs. Harrison.

Mrs. Harrison acted been a prisoner in Russia since October of last year. She entered Russia the previous February and for a time was popular in that country as a result of her sympathies. These ceased early in October.

Senator France went to Russia to investigate at first hand conditions in that country. He had difficulty in securing permission to enter, and it was made part of the permit that he should not attempt to see or communicate with any American prisoners.

The Sun's staff correspondent, who accompanied Senator France to Russia, was not permitted to enter Russia with the party.

SCHLATTER, "DIVINE HEALER," IS FOUND

Ottawa, Ont., July 30.—Francis Schlatter, so-called "divine healer," missing from his home in Annisquam, Mass., since June 25, has been found by officials of the Dominion of Canada Immigration Bureau at Montreal. Schlatter was identified by means of a photograph sent from Boston.

He will be returned to the United States according to the Canadian law, it was declined further to discuss the case.

Schlatter left his summer cottage in Annisquam, it was supposed, to meet with the announcement that he was to be married to Mrs. Mrs. Schlatter, received word that he had left on a train for Montreal but did not hear from him again until today.

"I believe he is suffering from an attack of nerves," she declared, in discussing the case. "The police tried to convince me that my husband deserted me. That is nonsense. He loves me devotedly."

Schlatter is oddly known, having traveled the United States nearly five years in fulfilling his mission revealed by himself. He claims to have healed thousands of people among them the mother of the late President McKinley.

ROBBERS LOOT MAIL CAR ON CRACK TRAIN

Creep From Rods on Manhattan Limited, Wound Clerk, Rifle Mail Bags and Flee

Pittsburgh, July 30.—The New York-Pittsburgh-Chicago Limited on the Pennsylvania railroad was held up and robbed of mail bags early today, according to word received at the general offices of the railroad company here.

One mail clerk was wounded, the robbers escaped with the mail bags, but the amount is not yet known.

The Manhattan limited is the crack train on the Pennsylvania railroad between New York and Chicago. The train left New York at 6.05 last night and was due here at 4.30 this morning. It carries no day coaches and makes few stops.

After passing through the Gallitzin tunnel, west of Altoona, the train was stopped and the holdup engineer cut off. The bandits had been riding the rods and after the train had got under way again the bandits, risking their lives, crawled from under the mail cars and crept through an open door of the mail car, subduing the clerks after a fierce struggle. The mail clerks who were sorting mail, however, were not severely injured.

MAIL CLERK WOUNDED.

Taking some mail bags these combined with the bandits demand for money. Only $200 was found, and after there had been an argument with one of the clerks who had declared that he had no money, the bandit pulled out a gun and fired a bullet through his body just above the heart.

Clerks in charge of the Lake Shore Hospital, The mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Doty will recover. Her daughter at the hospital at Mrs. Gurnella will probably never be able to speak again. Her tongue was split and the roof of her mouth terrible cleaved.

According to the police, Gurnella, who is Portuguese, was the common law of Mrs. Wife, who is but twenty-three and a native of Boston, Mass. About a week ago, the police say, he found a letter from a man in the Azores asking Mrs. Correia to send her husband and come to the Azores to him.

COOLIDGE OPENS BIG PAGEANT BY WIRE

Starts Chicago Fair While Spending the Week-End in Boston for a Rest

In the lobby of the Touraine, Calvin Coolidge, Vice President of the United States, pushed the button which started the Pageant of Progress in Chicago. The former governor had just two sentiments, as he sauntered in Boston today. The first is said, was relief at getting away from the heat of Washington. The second, was pleasure to be back in Boston once again.

The heat of Washington is the worst I ever encountered," he said. "It may have slipped here this last week, but the nights were a little cooler. You get rest then. In Washington, however, the level of heat was all the time. That is one of the reasons Mrs. Coolidge and I ran away to rest.

We shall return to Swampscott to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stearns and on Monday the Plymouth to meet the President for the Plymouth exercises. It is going to be a great city and there is plenty to interest there, but Boston will always be pleasant to me, as I come back home."

With Vice-President Coolidge are Mrs. Coolidge and the two boys, John and Calvin, jr., who all came on from Washington together.

PRODUCERS LOOK FOR LOWER FREIGHT RATES

Washington, July 30.—Producers of farm products, by forcing a voluntary agreement of the railroads to reduce export grain rates, have subsequently obtained the way for substantial reductions in freight rates on staple commodities. The shippers are confident that sweeping cuts in domestic rates on important farm products will be soon authorized.

Action of the rail executives in sanctioning an application for a 25 per cent cut on rates on export grain from Great Lakes ports to the seaboard over Eastern railroads is expected to be followed soon by similar measures to readjust the rates on grain from central territory to seaboard points.

The reduction just agreed upon of five cents a hundred pounds on wheat, corn and rye from Buffalo, Erie and Fairport to New York and other seaboard destinations is expected to result in a similar reduction from points in central rail territory.

Providence, July 30.—Peter Conway, forty years old, of No. 4 Cliff street, was arraigned in Sixth District Court today charged with breaking and entering the home of Stephen McNaugh and the larceny of two diamonds valued at $500 each. He pleaded not guilty and was held without bail until August 5.

Flimsy Bathing Suits of Nymphs Barred in Worcester

Worcester, July 30.—When a Worcester nymph trips nimbly to the water's edge clad economically in a one-piece bathing suit that appears to be "a bit daring," Miss Elizabeth Tracey, policewoman, is on the job.

"In such a case we simply advise sewing a little more on," says Miss Tracey, who keeps a watchful eye open for flimsy garments which might cause eye strain. The "offender" seldom repeats the "offense."

TROOPS CALLED IN VERMONT STRIKE

Military Takes Charge After Shots Are Fired at Strike-Breakers

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 30.—State troops, under command of Major Leonard F. Wing of Rutland, took charge of the situation here early today, following the firing of a number of shots into a camp of strike-breakers which was late yesterday by the Champlain Realty Company.

Company I, headed by Captain Gibson of Brattleboro, reached here early this morning in motor trucks, having made the journey all the night in the dark in less than two hours.

Company A, of Rutland, commanded by Captain Kelly, is on its way here, also in motor trucks.

George A. Chesley, state manager for New Hampshire and Vermont of the Champlain Realty Company, a subsidiary concern of the International Paper Company, the strike of the mill employes is the cause of the trouble, said today that he intended bringing a number of additional strike-breakers during the day and probably more on Monday.

STRIKE-BREAKERS SET TO WORK.

Mr. Chedel yesterday brought in a dozen men from the camps of his company in the northern timber lands of the state, and immediately set them to work on the Vermont side of the river, not far from the log boom above the town, constructing a dam.

Three tents were raised. Sheriff Wellman of Brattleboro, with fifteen deputies, then arrived to guard the workers.

Though large crowds of strikers and strike sympathizers gathered on the Bellows Falls end of the bridge on the interstate bridge between Bellows Falls and North Walpole, nothing was reported from the Vermont side of the newcomers.

Preparing to State's Attorney Harold Whitney, during the night eleven rifle shots were fired into the strike-breaking camp, according to information received by the Connecticut River.

Sheriff Wellman, of Brattleboro, appeared to have come from the vicinity of the Catholic Church in North Walpole.

Mr. Whitney immediately notified Governor Proctor, who issued orders sending the militia here.

DENY UNION MEN FIRED.

The Rev. Father Marshall, pastor of the Catholic church in the assistant Father Duffy, both denied today that any shots had been fired from near the church or that so far as they knew any have been fired from the Nea Hampshire side of the river.

Michael Curtin and Michael Mannion, the former the president and the latter the secretary of the Paper Handlers' Union, declared that they had fired any shots, "if any have been fired at all."

Mr. Chedel admitted that none of his employes had reported to him that they had been fired at, but said that a man to whom she rented a room early in the day left an hour or two after the shots were fired. He owes $200 and $300 worth of property belonging to other employes. Four rooms were ransacked and three or four watches, a diamond ring and three suits of men's clothes were taken.

GIRL NEARLY LOSES LIFE SAVING SUPPOSED "BABY"

Mistaking a bag of rubbish floating in the water for a baby, a number of women called the attention of Miss Marjorie Moore, aged twenty-four, of No. 15 Dartmouth street, to the inlet off the Headhouse, at City Point, this afternoon. Without pause to the rescue of the supposed baby, a mile distant, and collapsed after covering the distance in record time. She was rescued by Joseph Weeder and life savers and removed unconscious to the Headhouse. She was later removed to the City Hospital. She will recover.

WAGNER AND GORDON TO TESTIFY

Will Take Stand for Tufts and Their Part in the "$7,500 Holdup"

Assistant District Attorney Herman A. Wagner of Middlesex and Police Captain Herbert Gordon of Cambridge will be witnesses for the defense today at the resumption of the trial of District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts before the Supreme Court for alleged malfeasance.

Both have been mentioned frequently in the course of the Tufts trial.

Gordon has been named as a co-conspirator of Tufts in the alleged $7,500 "shake-down" of the officers of the International Service Company, Inc. Wagner is not named as a co-conspirator, but Tufts has maintained that the not pressing or filing of various charges against by Attorney-General Allen's charges was Wagner's doing.

The assistant district attorney is expected to absolve Tufts of all responsibility and justify his own course in these debated cases.

Captain Gordon's appearance on the stand is awaited with as much interest as was that of Tufts himself, for the Cambridge police officials' name runs like a thread through the whole case. He has for long been attached to Tufts' office and the chief lieutenant of the Middlesex district attorney.

Wagner and Gordon will take the stand when the cross-examination of William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex County, is concluded.

Corcoran was on for more than an hour yesterday and was principally questioned as to the alleged "shake-down" to the International Service Company for the sum of $7,500.

He admitted getting $7,500 from the officers of the company for refraining from prosecuting after they had threatened with prosecution for violation of the banking laws.

But this was a fee, not a "hold-up," Corcoran insisted, in a spirited cross-examination with Special Assistant Attorney-General Henry F. Hurlburt.

The attorney generals' private secretary, Miss Mary Fairs was merciless in his calm persistency. Tufts told how she had bought flowers for the benefit of his mother. He came near touching on the latter's eccentricities by money matters when he quoted him in his final talk as saying, "I don't want an office boy like Uncle Leonard," but got no further.

The defence will reply to the so-called "Arson Trust cases on Monday. Benjamin Slade will finish its case and Joseph Budnick will testify for Tufts. The defense will finish its case on Thursday. It is expected that arguments will be made next Friday, barring a request for delay.

HOUGHTON & DUTTON EMPLOYES HOLD OUTING

Between 500 and 900 employes of the Houghton & Dutton store, together with officials of the company, today went on their annual outing at Riverside Recreation Grounds, Boarding over the Boston & Albany at 11.10 o'clock and accompanied by the Waverly Band, they left South Station with a rousing cheers. Arriving at their destination they paraded to the grounds. After refreshments had been served a program of field and water sports followed, there being several novel events including a "prohibition" race between men and women, the "raspberry" relay race, the "Slumber Hill" for boys and girls under eighteen, a nail driving contest for women, "sink the sausage" a derby race and the tug of war of nine-men teams. A baseball game between the Houghton & Dutton and the R. H. White League teams was played. Dancing was enjoyed during the afternoon and evening. Among the officials present were W. J. Norton, president and general manager, Charles C. Veder, superintendent, and Herbert Vilton, publicity manager.

6-CENT CONES ARE DEMANDED BY HULTMAN

Chairman Eugene C. Hultman, of the State Commission on Necessaries of Life, is anxious to stamp out every vestige of profiteering in the ice cream business and with this end in view requests all citizens of the Commonwealth to report any instances where ice cream cones are being sold at more than five cents each.

Since the campaign inaugurated by the Middlesex district attorney's department, has begun the dealers, generally, have reduced prices.

Mr. Hultman feels that the only way to get under the skin of the profiteers is through publicity and if he is informed that any stores are charging ice cream cones for more than five cents each he will use his power to bring any such dealer to terms.

COLLEGE MEN SHOULD MEET EDISON TEST, EDUCATION HEAD SAYS

CRITICS OF WIZARD SCORED

By HAZEL CANNING.

Edison is a wise man after all. His questions are most eminently fit to ask of a college graduate, and the college graduate who cannot answer them simply doesn't know his geography, his history and the ordinary "three Rs" of his college curriculum.

This is the statement of no less a man than John J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

College professors of Harvard, Boston University, Institute of Technology and Tufts all came out at the time Edison's questions were published to the world with severest criticisms of them.

"MONKEY MEMORY TESTS."

"Mere monkey memory tests," said these gentlemen. "A college trains power, not memory; a college develops the way to find things, develops the ability to grapple with problems; it does not, or it should not, cram the mind with a lot of superfluous addenda, such as the place from which we get prunes."

To which the U. S. Commissioner of Education, Tigert, replies with a scoffing "fiddle-de!"

"A college should send out young men who know where prunes come from," said he. "If he doesn't, the college is at fault, and the student. How, I ask you, is a young man's ability trained, unless by mastering the problems given him in college?

"Those problems are to learn world data, as set forth in the histories. Those boys who do not learn them—and they are legion—are just exSpringfield "about the middle of next week."

Springfield "about the middle of next week."

"IGNORANCE" AT YALE.

"Dean Brown, of Yale, told a story which illustrates the 'amazing ignorance' aside.

"A student was asked what Magna Charta was, and he replied: 'Magna Charta was a soldier in the Revolution who was wounded, and then died, fell dead by his wife, Mrs. Carter, took up his gun and said 'shoot if you must this old gray head, but we'll die fighting.' Now, all the facts are there, but not on the lines if it takes all Summer."

"Now view the Edison questions from the American standard—efficiency; from the money making standpoint, dollars. Edison has ideas stamped on his head which are worth into the billions of dollars; his ideas, translated into money, constitute one-fortieth of the wealth of the United States.

"Therefore, I believe, that his say so, as to what questions are fitting to put to college graduates whom he wishes to employ, is worth that of a hundred of his critics.

EXPERIMENT PROVES WORTH

"Walter Dell Scott, in Chicago, devised a similar system of questioning by which to choose prospective salesmen for business men. He was ridiculed; his questions came in for a lot of adverse criticism, called out by Edison's.

"Then an experiment was tried. Employes who had actually been employed at a plant, for which Scott had formed questionaires, were tried by him—the good and the inefficient. He put his same questions to them, and those who passed best were the ones who had rendered the best service at the plant.

"So would it be, were the same tests applied to the Edison questions. We should know that the public knows what he is about, in this one thing, as in the rest of his undertakings."

Girl Held as Witness Against Man She Says Attacked Her

ELSIE NORLING.

Fifteen-year-old Elsie Norling, of Gloucester, who left her home to secure employment in Boston and who alleges she was attacked and robbed of $12 by Thomas Murray, colored, of No. 18 Dartmouth place, South End, yesterday was placed in custody of Probation Officer Miss Ethel Wood, then voluntarily went to the Welcome Home, South End, until the case comes up again in Municipal Court, August 2.

Murray was remanded to Charles Street Jail, in default of $4,000 bail.

Miss Norling, against the advice of a brother, gathered her personal belongings, including a Swedish passport, left her position at the Ocean View Hotel, Pigeon Cove, Gloucester, and came to Boston. Police are investigating a letter of introduction to Murray, supposedly written by a domestic who worked with the girl.

SAYS CYCLOPS WAS PREY OF U-BOATS

German Officer Has Explanation of Disappearance of Collier

By International News Service.

Philadelphia, July 30.—The navy collier Cyclops, which furnished the greatest mystery of the war by its unexplained disappearance, fell a prey to the torpedoes of German submarines operating off the South American coast, according to Franz Rattle, now second officer of the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland, who was senior lieutenant on a U-boat during the war.

Rattle praised the convoy system developed by Admiral Sims, saying that he said, made it almost impossible for U-boats to sink American transports. The only feasible method of attack was to dive under the protecting destroyer and torpedo the transport inside the convoy lines, a risk which few U-boat officers were willing to take, he said.

The lieutenant described U-boat operations off the English coast, by which his boat was badly damaged by two "mystery ships" disguised as merchantmen. He learns this marking where shrapnel caught him as he was closing the coaling lower after the submarine crew was forced to abandon the deck gun. On another trip Lieutenant Rattle said his U-boat approached so close to Newcastle, England, that the crew took turns shooting at crowds of Sunday promenaders on the shore through the periscope.

PONZI PROTESTS HANOVER TRUST CO. SALE

Jailed "Financier" in Letter to Court Clerk Declares He Is a Director

Charles Ponzi, one-time get-rich-quick advocate and at present an inmate of the Plymouth jail, has protested the sale by Bank Commissioner Allen of the assets and property of the Hanover Trust Company to the Boston National Bank.

Ponzi declared that he was a director and the largest individual stockholder and depositor of the Hanover Trust Company, and asserted that its sale would cause him a loss of $775,512.

In his protest, which was mailed from the Plymouth jail to John F. Cronin, clerk of the Supreme Court, Ponzi took Commissioner Allen to task for closing the trust company. He declared that Allen's action was arbitrary and that he later dissipated the assets to justify it.

Furthermore, according to the protest, Allen refused or neglected to furnish Ponzi with an itemized statement of the bank's assets and liabilities. He added that it was his duty, when the trustees failed to do so, to look after his creditors, having been adjudged a bankrupt, against his wishes. He feels, he stated, in view of his creditors' welfare, that he must exercise due caution in either assenting or dissenting from the plan of sale.

The unique document concludes with a request for an opportunity for Ponzi to examine the condition of the bank and the records of its administration by the bank commissioner, in order that he may intelligently and conscientiously decide whether it would be for the best interests of all concerned that he should assent to the plan. If his request is denied, Ponzi asks the court to reserve to him the right to proceed later in civil or criminal action against such persons as may have or will jeopardize his interests in the bank.

GOV. SMALL ON TOUR OF ROAD INSPECTION

By International News Service.

Chicago, July 30. — Governor Len Small toured through Kane County today inspecting roads in the neighborhood of Elgin, Marengo, Frankfort and Dwight were on the Governor's announced itinerary for the day.

The trip was made in connection with plans for awarding contracts for State highway construction work, the Governor announced. He denied that it had anything to do with delaying the serving of warrants for his arrest that have been issued in Springfield, as a result of his indictments on a charge of embezzling State interest funds.

"I will be available to anybody who has any official business to transact," the Governor said. He reiterated his intention to return to

MAN ACCUSED OF BIGAMY HELD IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, July 30.—Chester E. McDonald, twenty-eight years old, Boston and Maine station agent at Durham, N. H., alleged bigamist, was held by Judge John J. Winn, in the Central District Court, in $1,000 bail for his further appearance on August 6, on request of the police, who desire to procure further evidence.

McDonald's first wife, Mrs. Myrtle McDonald, of South Berwick, Me., was in court with her sister. She says she married McDonald in Boston, when.

The police allege McDonald left her last February and married here in March by the Rev. H. W. Hook to Miss Cunnif, of Brookline, with whom he is now living at Durham.

Attorney Frederick Magison has been retained by the second wife. It is possible that McDonald will claim a divorce from his first wife, as she says he told her that he secured it in Maine or Massachusetts.

Investigating the records of the city clerk, McDonald, when he obtained his second marriage application, stated that he was a Protestant clergyman. There is a child by the second wife.

May "Cure" Arlington Prisoner by Brain Operation

By International News Service.

New Haven, Ct., July 30.—An operation to cure his criminal tendencies believed to be induced by a pressure on the brain is likely to be performed on Theodore Scanlon of Arlington, Mass., arrested in Bridgeport June 4 for the theft of postal money order blanks and held for trial in the United States court here in September. The young man is now in New Haven jail awaiting trial.

A fall from a tree when Scanlon was a boy is said to have given him a dual personality. His brother, John P. Scanlon of Brooklyn, N. Y., was here yesterday conferring with Federal officials, and Scanlon will be examined by physicians to confirm the theory of his relatives.

29,000,000 FEEL HUNGER PINCH IN RUSSIA

Conditions Worse Than Great Famine of 1891, Writes Maxim Gorky

By International News Service.

Berlin, July 30.—The famine in Russia is greater than the great famine of 1891. More than 29,000,000 Russians are feeling the pinch of hunger. More than 6,000,000 Russians, mostly peasants, are in flight from their homes.

The foregoing statements were contained in a letter received today by Madame Gorky from her husband, Maxim Gorky of Moscow.

Madame Gorky, whose stage name is Marie Andreyava, is in Berlin on theatrical business. She is in fact engaged in relief work.

"I have no authority to speak officially, and anyhow I have been absent from Russia for three months," said Madame Gorky. "I am going to Moscow to join me soon. He tells me that as soon as the Autumn harvest comes in all will be well.

"I have just received a letter from my friend which says: 'The distress is appalling and is getting worse. Already this year is greater than the terrible days of 1891.'

"More than 29,000,000 persons are suffering from famine. More than 6,000,000 are in flight from their homes. Great harvests are burned by the Tartar tribes.

"Whole bands of men, women and children are engaged in the hopeless search for food."

Gorky is organizing a committee at Moscow to obtain both internal and external help for the sufferers.

"The Russian people have acquired the habit of suffering," said Mme. Gorky.

"They still have great physical powers of resistance, but they are being weakened by hunger. They are becoming more and more susceptible to disease.

"Russia does not want charity. She is willing to pay for what she gets. Russia is not a beggar. All she asks is a chance to grain and cotton and pay for them with work. She is badly in need of agricultural machinery and other supplies."

AMERICANS HOT AS SHIP STAYS AT 3-MILE LIMIT

Captain Hangs Outside Till Aug. 1 in Order to Land Greek Immigrants

By International News Service.

New York, July 30.—Just outside the three-mile limit, where cooling breezes blow and clinking glasses need never be empty, 130 American citizens, passengers aboard the Greek liner Megali Hellas, fumed and fretted and got themselves all hot under the collar today. To no effect.

The skipper, wise to the new immigration law, won't bring his ship in until the first of the month. Greece has reached her quota of immigrants for July. But Captain Hayajis knows that if he can delay his arrival until August 1 he can land all his Greeks under the August quota.

The American citizens among his passengers claim that this business of Greek meeting an emergency is all very well, but they want to go ashore. Wireless bombardment of Ellis Island and Washington has proved futile.

Authorities say it is up to the line, as Captain Hayajis swings in his hammock and lets them rave.

And the bar is open all day long.

BEACH FOLK IN WAR ON POISON JELLYFISH

Cottagers Haul Pests to Shore From Bayside to Allerton; Few Bathers Appear

Scores of cottagers, armed with long poles, grappling irons and every available weapon at Nantasket, cleared the waters from Allerton to Bayside in an attempt to rid the bathing beaches of the poison jellyfish that have infested the waters there for the past two days.

Hundreds of jellyfish, some of them measuring as large as three feet in diameter, were dragged ashore by the volunteer crew of workers and buried in the sands to prevent further poisoning cases.

The schools of jellyfish that were first sighted off Allerton and Bayside have been reinforced by additional schools which are floating in the water near the state bath house on the Metropolitan reservation. Several people have been poisoned in this section, according to officials of the state reservation.

At Allerton, Bayside and Kenberma sections, less than a hundred people braved the danger of being poisoned. Several who waded in the water near the state bath house and dragged the fish up to the shore, were forced to seek medical relief.

Dr. Walter H. Stiurgis, of Allerton, stated that the poison is not dangerous but is very painful and advises those stricken with the poison to keep infected parts of the body clean.

WHIPPING POST DEMANDED IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, July 30.—Establishment of a whipping post is demanded in a petition to be presented at the next meeting of the City Council.

The petition is signed by many business men and others who favor it.

They want the whipping post as a punishment for various crimes, particularly theft, breaking and entering and robbery.

They point out that a generation of young men is growing up without "wholesome respect or fear of God or man," and that crimes against property are constantly on the increase.

Jail has no terrors for the young thieves who prefer to live by their wits and these business men.

Only physical punishment and humiliation will serve as a deterrent, Solomon Rabitsek heads the list of signers.

MARRIED MEN ACCUSED BY YOUNG GIRLS

Sought Financial Aid From Friend Whose Wife Was Away

Stories of parties at which two young girls and two married men played the leading roles were told in the Roxbury District Court today when Celia Andrews, seventeen years old, No. 4 Woodcliff street, Roxbury, and Catherine Gilmore, also seventeen, of No. 15 Brookford street, Roxbury, were arraigned before Judge Sullivan, charged with being stubborn children.

The two girls, who are extremely attractive, disappeared from their homes last Tuesday afternoon after Miss Andrews had had a quarrel with her parents because she had lost her job in a shoe factory.

Miss Gilmore, who also works in a factory, still had her job, but decided that if her chum was to go out into the world she should not go alone. She therefore quit her position and went with Celia.

According to the story told in court today, neither of them had any money Tuesday night, but the Andrews girl had a friend, a married man, whose wife was in the country.

To him they went for assistance, say the girls. He agreed to give them lodging and food. That night he sent out for a friend, also reported to be married, and the four staged a party which the police declare was a wild one and lasted until late that night.

Wednesday there was another meeting and again on Thursday night. Sergeant Walsh of the Dudley street station and Special Officer Wall learned of the presence of the girls in the house yesterday and their arrest followed.

Judge Harden held them in $200 bail each for hearing Monday morning, sending them in the meantime to the House of the Good Shepherd.

The arrest of the two men on a serious charge, is expected today or tomorrow.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ON PLYMOUTH OUTING

Boston and other Bay State Knights of Pythias, together with their Pythian sisters, left by boat and train for Plymouth today on their annual outing. It was estimated "more orders" were in attendance. Congressman Tom Connally of Texas was the guest of the day.

At Plymouth a parade was led by Grand Chancellor Ernest L. Elliott of Salem, followed by grand lodge officers and guests of honor. Then came Brigadier-General Lewis J. McKenzie of the uniform rank and staff. Captain Harry L. Frothingham, Boston, who has been in charge of the arrangements for the parade, came next in command of the uniform department, K. of P., Massachusetts brigade. The members of Ancient Ben Adhem Temple and visiting members of the other temples of the Knights of Khorassan were next in line, headed by Royal Vizier C. Frank Nelson of Springfield. Principal Knights of the uniform, and Sabbatia Temple, Pythian Sisters, both of Plymouth, brought up the rear of the parade and were followed by those who came by boats, automobiles and trains. A number of bands were in line.

BOSTON SCHOONER WITH BIG FISH CATCH SUNK

Halifax, N. S., July 30.—The Boston fishing schooner Genesta with forty thousand pounds of fish aboard was sunk in collision with the Tern schooner Mary G. Duff sixty miles off Shelburne early yesterday morning. The collision occurred in a dense fog and the twenty Fishermen were rescued by the Mary G. Duff and landed at Shelburne. The Genesta was in charge of Captain Thomas Knights. The Mary G. Duff was bound from Halifax to Vineyard Haven.

INDIANA STEEL MILLS RESTORE PRE-WAR PAY

Hammond, Ind., July 30.—Notices were posted today at the Inland Steel mills that, beginning Monday, new rates of pay for day and tonnage workers, based on rates in effect in 1917, would be effective. The basic common labor rate will be thirty cents an hour, conforming with adjustments made by other steels mills in the district.

CONNOLLY TELLS OF TORTURE OF IRISH

Maltreated Youths Refuse to Betray Comrades and Become Felons

TORTURED IRELAND

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY
Famous New England Author and Journalist.

There was one sentry, Conway, broke through the Black and Tan line, badly wounded. He crawled four miles to a bog and hid. The Black and Tans got a blood hound and tracked him down. The blood hound leaped for Conway, who shot him dead. The Black and Tans then swiped Conway till they killed him.

FIVE YEARS APIECE.

There were about 156 young men at the dance; of these about sixty broke through the armed firing line; seventy odd were captured, and pretty generally beaten up by the Crown people, after they got them safe in the lorries and later into the barracks. There was a "trial," at which practically all of the captured young men were given five years' penal servitude apiece. For what? Lord knows! "Doubtless because they escaped being shot dead in their rush from the hall," was the answer of a man of Bruff to the question.

My guide for the run out was that unterrified Miss Daly, who had been so harried by the police. To her I said on getting back to Limerick: "I have good reason to think that I am being spotted wherever I go now. Aren't you afraid of being marked out for showing me around?"

Her reply was: "What more can they do to me except shoot me? Let them!"

The more outrageous the conduct of the military the more unbroken the spirit of the men over here, and the women, too. "What will be the end of it?" I asked one woman of Limerick.

"Let them clear out or wipe us out," was her calm answer. Such being the courage of the women, what do you suppose the fighting men in the hills are? "There's no beating them; they will win, they will win." I found myself saying before I left Limerick.

YOUTHS ABUSED.

There was a "trial" just before I reached Limerick of a dozen boys who had been captured on a Sunday afternoon with an ancient broken musket in a woods. They were fooling with it when the military pounced down and took them in. They were charged with drilling, which is a felony in Ireland.

Ten of these boys managed to slip out from the jail a signed statement as to how they were beaten up on their way to barracks, and after they reached the barracks. They were pounded and kicked with fists, booted feet, rifle and revolver butts, standing up and lying down.

The head and stomach were the favorite targets. They were made to eat cigarettes because they were Irish cigarettes; they were held up at the point of a pistol and told that they had two minutes, one minute, three minutes to live if they did not give information about I. R. A. men they were supposed to know.

Not being able to get anything out of the boys, all from sixteen to thirteen years of age, they gave them from three to ten years in English prisons. The boys in the south and west of Ireland are the cleanest boys morally, the most innocent of evil, particularly sexual evil, of any boys in the world.

Imagine those boys living in associate daily with the depraved beings of English prisons! If we could have been confined in Ireland just as well, but the English military set up nights over there to think out the worst possible punishments for the Irish, thereby proving again how unfitted to govern Ireland.

They do not war on women! No! Oh, no! Miss Daly gave me a list of those she knew around Limerick. Afterwards, when I met her she told me she overlooked some. Here is one:

DRIVES INTO COLD.

The Black and Tans broke into Mrs. Dawson's home one night, drove her and her two young children and her old aunt out of the house, without giving them even time to dress. They grabbed a coat and shawl in passing, and that was all. Mrs. Dawson was at this time awaiting her confinement.

They pulled her husband out of bed, fired volleys inside the house, came out and told her that as it was now all over with her husband she could get along.

She was in her bare feet, and this took place on a Winter's night in the country, in Limerick. She had to walk a mile or so, all this time believing her husband murdered, before she found shelter. She had to still the cries of the children and look out for the old aunt also. In the morning, after such a night of terror and exposure, her baby was born.

After she had left her home, the husband was taken out and beaten. They may have thought they killed him when they left him there unconscious on the road, where in the Winter's morning neighbors found him. He was taken to a hospital in Limerick and it was six weeks before he recovered sufficiently from the beating they gave him to be able to leave the hospital. When he did get out of the hospital he had to go on the run to remain alive.

When the wife could get out again after the birth of her baby and the condition brought on by her exposure on that terrible night she went back to her own home. She found every bit of furniture had been burnt by the Black and Tans. There was not a bed for herself or the babies to lie on, not even a chair to sit on.

Through the smashed doors and every broken light of window glass the Winter wind was driving. And with her husband on the run she had no means of living. Can anybody dig up any savages from the wilds to equal that? But there are yet people in the world who think the English should rule Ireland.

"DOG EAT DOG."

I intended to go to Castle Connell, just outside Limerick City, but I did not get time. There was another line happening there (when I relate with more peace of mind from most things I have to tell about). It was a case of dog eat dog, neither dog being an Irish one.

The Castle Connell affair started with the coming to town one morning of three I. R. A. men from the hills. They went to O'Donovan's Hotel. There they were seen by a spy and the word was carried at once to the Black and Tans at the barracks, who thereupon made preparations for a killing.

There being three I. R. A. men to overpower, an adequate force would be necessary. So out from the barracks rolled a train of armored cars and lorries. There were 65, some say 80, men in the party, with a full equipment of rifles, machine guns, pistols and bombs.

SEA OUTING FOR DISABLED WAR VETERANS PROPOSED

Efforts to secure the permission of the United States Shipping Board to use one of the idle wooden ships to take disabled World War veterans for a day's outing on the water are being made by the hospitalization committee of the American Legion. It is believed that, should a couple be obtained along the harbor to operate the vessel, leaving only the cost of coal, which is estimated at $150 a day, to be defrayed. The Kenwood Country Club of Salem will entertain disabled ex-service men of Boston and vicinity at their club on Saturday, August 20.

ACCIDENT ENDS USE OF LUBRICATED AMMUNITION

On account of an accident, when a rifle at the Wakefield range prematurely exploded, injuring the eye and face of a major in the army, Major-General C. H. Edwards has issued an order and condemns "the use of lubricated ammunition for its tendency to collect grit, dust and other substances which will introduce foreign material into the bore. the use of lubricants is also apt to increase pressure beyond the danger point."

MISS CONSUELO BATES

By BETTY ALDEN

Yacht owners everywhere are watching with keen interest the sailing races of the New York Yacht Club on its cruise to Newport. Several boats owned by prominent Bostonians are showing up well in the struggle for "the supremacy of the seas." Nathaniel Ayer's schooner, "Queen Mab," won second place in the race for the Rear Commodore's cup, giving the trophy to Horatio Shennard's "Joanita." The "Queen Mab," whose present owner dwells at No. 515 Beacon street, was formerly owned by Harold S. Vanderbilt, under the name of "Vagrant," and was a consistent winner in the club cruise races. Where in the other schooner class were "Shawna," owned by Elmer Bliss of Boston, and H. S. Noble's "Virginia."

The "Squaw," owned by John S. Lawrence of Commonwealth avenue and Topsfield, joined the squadron of the New York Yacht Club at Morris Cove and started in the races, coming second in the class of 40-footers.

When the club gathered at Newport today, many craft belonging to the Eastern Yacht Club joined the New York fleet. Many members of the North Shore Summer colony deserted their estates and sailed down to Rhode Island's famous resort, for the Astor and King's cup races, which start on Tuesday next, always prove an irresistable magnet for yacht owners. Besides, the arrival of the New York fleet at Newport is bound to result in a social cloudburst, and there will be entertainments galore along the splendid mansions which make Newport a mecca for the fashionables.

The marriage of Miss Rosamond Thomas Bennett to George Sturgis took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon at "Brookwood," the summer home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Crocker Bennett. The wedding was to be very quiet, with only members of the family present. The attendants were Mrs. Louise C. Zanner of Worcester, sister of the bride, and the best man, Bulkeley Smith of Groton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. Robert Shaw Sturgis of Bay State road.

Mrs. Edward MacDowell will give a piano recital tomorrow evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Bigelow, Jr., on Nichols road, Cohasset, for the benefit of the Edward MacDowell Association of Peterboro, N. H., and the Sonlight Repair Shop at Solitude. Mrs. Lawrence Morgan is in charge of the tickets.

Not a few members of Boston's younger set have been answering the "Call to Labrador." One of the most recent to join the club is Hollis S. French, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hollis French of Mt. Vernon street and of the Annisquam Summer colony. Hollis will be with the Grenfells' mission for the rest of the Summer. His two brothers, Alden and Stanley G. French, have been at the mission in previous Summers.

President and Mrs. Harding have as guests aboard the "Mayflower" on its cruise to Plymouth, Secretary of War Weeks, who will entertain the Chief Executive and Mrs. Harding the next week on his farm in Lancaster, New Hampshire.

Friends of Vice-President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge are looking forward to their arrival in Plymouth, for the Governor of Massachusetts and his wife, plan to visit many of the old Bay State friends after they have attended the Pilgrim celebration.

COMPETITION IS KEEN FOR BIG RACE HONORS

Entrants Practicing Daily at Beaches for Boston American Swim

Fill in Blanks, Girls, and Join in Big Swimming Race

Entry for Boston American Girls' Championship Swimming race:

.....

From Sunnyside Park, Braintree, comes word that the girls in that section are backing Ingrid Linklonen, nineteen years old, to win first prize and the title of New England amateur girl champion in the big race to be held by the Boston American in the Charles River Basin, Saturday afternoon, August 27.

Miss Linklonen took part in last year's event and made a splendid showing. Her friends declare she is endowed with that "stick-to-it-iveness" spirit which will land her the much coveted prize if she keeps up the strides she is making in practice swims at Nantasket beach.

Rose Burke of Holley square, Boston, is another fair swimmer who is taking practice swims at Nantasket beach for the race and is confident of swimming off with the major prize. Alma Johnson of M street, South Boston, is daily buffeting the waves at City Point and getting in fine shape for the race. She says the other girls will have to go some to hold their own with her in battling for first place.

Annie Mclaughlin, fourteen years old, of Bridge street, Cambridge; Estelle Zinta, twelve years old, of No. 337 Presidents street, Dorchester; May Ryan, No. 2440 Washington street, Roxbury; May Rushey, fourteen years old, No. 2 Gurney street, Roxbury; Helen Patricia Shea, fifteen years old, No. 5 Earle street, Worcester, and Jeanette B. Golden, eighteen years old, No. 22 North Russell street, West End, are among the latest entrants who figure on capturing prizes in the race.

The course selected by the Boston American for the race covers one and one-half miles and 200 feet. It is regarded by athletes as the best in the country for conducting a swimming event. The start will be made from the raft in front of the Union Boat Club house, up stream to the steel boat near Harvard bridge, rounding the boat at the left, and then down stream to the starting point.

Every safeguard will be made for the protection of the swimmers. Plenty of row boats and steam launches will be manned by experienced men who are accustomed to the task of life-saving at Revere Beach, under the direction of John J. (Ma) Flaherty.

During the progress of the race there will be aquatic stunts by semi-professional high divers, who will perform stunts on the spring board of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

All swimming girls who would like to take part in the race are invited to fill out the blank on this page and mail it to the Swimming Editor, Boston American, No. 30 Summer street, Boston, Mass. No fee is required.

NOT THE WASSERMAN IN THE TUFTS CASE

Jacob Wasserman, election commissioner and attorney of Boston, is not the Jacob A. Wasserman mentioned in one of the specifications filed by Attorney-General Allen in his charges against District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex County. Commissioner Wasserman has written to the Boston American to clear the fact and calling that the attention of the public be drawn to it. "I should like to have you state that I am not and never have been involved in any of the proceedings," writes Mr. Wasserman.

WHATEVER else may be required of the evening frock this season in Paris, it must lend itself agreeably to the dance. This means, in particular, that it must allow freedom of motion, and the two frocks above have been designed with this end in view. At the left, a slip of lustrous satin is completely veiled with spangled net, which extends a little below the skirt to give it the desired length. The narrow girdle at the natural waist-line is of jet and spangles, and an ornament of jet trimmed with three short gold tassels is worn in the hair.

BROCADED crepe in turquoise blue and silver is combined with plain turquoise blue crepe, accordion-pleated, in a youthful dance dress (right). The wrapped bodice has its neck-line higher in front than at the back, and ties in a large bow over the hip. Oddly draped points of the crepe at the sides of the skirt contribute bouffancy of outline, and the points at the lower edge add length.

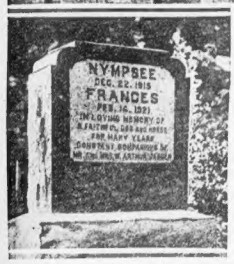
PEGGY HYLAND, MOVIE STAR, YIELDS AT LAST TO CUPID'S PLEA



DEAD DOG! Philadelphia can boast of many queer things, but one of the oddest is a dog cemetery, spotted with costly and richly carved tombstones. Below, an expensive tribute to the memory of Nympsee and Frances, a dog and horse. The graves receive the same tender care as those of humans. (Int.)

ARLINGTON TO HOUSE OPERA

Boston Society of Singers Will Present Program in English With Large Chorus

By FRED J. McISAAC.

A new operatic project called the Boston Society of Singers, with Edward M. Beck as impresario, has taken a three-year lease on the Arlington Theatre, and confidently hopes to revive the old operatic glories of that house.

According to the prospectus there will be a chorus of fifty and an orchestra of thirty, performing a complete grand operatic repertory in English. Nothing is said about the principals at this time.

Mr. Beck has been operating grand opera on a small scale for several seasons with varying success. He had a season at the Arlington two years ago, and during the past Spring he essayed a Gilbert and Sullivan at the Copley Theatre, which failed.

Mr. Beck, in three or four pages of his prospectus, talks about the cause of opera in English and appeals for public support.

It is quite possible to give good operatic performances at the prices he proposes to ask, provided the impresario is not lured into pursuing stars and is sufficient of a musician to know a first class voice when he hears one. This is not often the case with opera impresarios, strange as it may sound. Oscar Hammerstein was no musician. Neither is Gatti Casazza of the Metropolitan nor was Manager Johnson of the Chicago Opera last season.

There are plenty of young singers with beautiful voices eager to appear in grand opera and willing to work reasonably. It's a matter of good judgment in picking them.

I agree with all Mr. Beck has to say regarding the need of teaching the public to love opera, but the only way to do it is to introduce them to good opera.

Unfortunately, most of the good English grand opera companies since Savage's day injured the cause of opera more than they helped it by giving performances which were simply travesties on opera. A person who had never heard an opera and who attended a performance by the average touring company would be hardly likely to attend another.

Mr. Beck seems to be earnest and sincere in his desire to give opera and I think he would like to give good opera if the public would support his enterprise sufficiently to enable him to do so. But you cannot give opera without a well-drilled chorus, a good orchestra and a well balanced cast, and these things are expensive. Hence hoping that the Boston Society of Singers get enough support to enable them to start well and keep going well.

HARTFORD HARMONIZERS

From a little theatre in the small town of Hartford, known as the Elm City of Connecticut, to the Grand Hippodrome, the largest amusement place in the world, is a long jump to make in one theatrical reference, and such was made by the Elm City Four, a quartet quite out of the ordinary, now playing an engagement at Norumbega Park Theatre.

One of Mr. Charles Dillingham's representatives, while passing through on to Boston, happened to drop into the small theatre to while away an evening, and, upon hearing those boys sing, got in touch with Mr. Dillingham and received him of the find. They were engaged for the New York Hippodrome, where they have been featured for the past three seasons.

At Norumbega Park this week, they are the feature attraction, and are pleasing the throngs of patronizers who go to this favorite resort daily.

REX INGRAM WAS BORN IN DUBLIN

Born in Dublin, Ireland, and a graduate of Trinity College, where his father was a professor, is the beckoning of Rex Ingram's "Who's Who," and right up until the time he was acclaimed the most capable and thorough director of the silent drama, after having completed "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," his film version of Vincente Blasco Ibanez' novel of like name, which is now current at the Globe Theatre, there has never been a dull moment in the life of this youthful genius. In 1911 Mr. Ingram came to America and in ten years he has accomplished what many men have striven three times as many years to attain. He did not enter the motion picture field at once. Some of his earlier experiences embraced night work in the freight yard at Belle Dock, New Haven, and he was subsequently promoted to tally man and track man for eight months. He then entered Yale and came out with flying colors with the class of 1914. While at Yale he met Eric O. Lawrie, who was a professor and sculptor at Yale Art School. Mr. Ingram not only studied under this master but later served as his assistant. His first experience in the field of the silent drama was with the Edison Company writing scenarios and acting for the screen and next a member of the old Vitagraph Stock Company, playing opposite Lillian Walker, Leah Baird, Helen Gardner and Clara Kimball Young, as well as continuing to write scripts. In "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" he has achieved a success that is the high light of his career.

GLOBE THEATRE

Now entering on its fourteenth capacity week at the Globe Theatre, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" continues to attract lovers of the silent drama from far and near. Of especial interest is the announcement that the photo-dramatization of Vicente Blasco Ibanez' classic is to be given two showings tomorrow, at 2:30 and 8.15 p. m.

Jack Hoxie, the celebrated movie star, is searching the country for a leading lady to star in his coming serial. He has toured the United States to find a type that will suit Jack. So far he has not yet succeeded in roping the girl he wants. Jack actually lassoes any girl that looks as though she will fill the bill.

While in Boston the noted cowboy will be the guest of the Lighting Photoplay Company, No. 70 Melrose street, Boston. He will appear at the Boston Arena on Thursday, August 4, mounted on his western cowpony. Pilgrim, that does all the stunts in the serials that have made him famous.

Jack will lasso the girl who appeals most to him from the thousands of dancers that appear on the floor the night of August 4.

On the morning of August 4 the cowboy will call on the [illegible] orphans at the Fenway Theatre, where he will perform some of the stunts, and show his latest picture.

"DEAR ME"

Jerry Golden announces a limited engagement of Grace La Rue and Hale Hamilton at the Hollis Street Theatre in the comedy, "Dear Me." Luther Reed and Hale Hamilton, beginning Monday night, August 29.

NORUMBEGA A POPULAR OUTING

Park on Charles River Is Always Cool Even on the Hottest Days of Summer

The terrifichy hot weather that we have experienced in the past week has not lessened the attendance at New England's favorite Summer resort, Norumbega Park, as the cooling breezes from the Charles River make an afternoon or evening enjoyably well spent. The amusements are of the variety which amuse from the youngest to the oldest. The coming week will have a stage show that is almost incomparable. The outstanding feature for next week will be Manuel Romaine and his two sons in a vocal specialty. Thousands of theatre-goers will remember Manuel Romaine as the silver-tongued tenor that was usually featured in every minstrel organization throughout the country, last seen at the Majestic Theatre some few years ago with Lew Dockstader's minstrels. The feature photoplay for the first three days will be one of Paramount's latest releases, entitled "Sentimental Tommy," featuring Gareth Hughes and Mabel Talliferro. For the last three days will be seen one of Metropolitan's picture successes entitled "Humoresque."

MUCH ABOUT MASSON

William C. Masson, who has been engaged as the stage director of the Boston Stock Company at the St. James Theatre, takes great pride in being able to claim Sydney, N. S. W., as his birthplace. He began his dramatic career in that city in 1877. He was the first of his family to adopt the stage as a profession and during his experience he has had opportunities to become acquainted with about every class of production included in the theatrical calendar. His first American appearance was made with Hoyt's "A Temperance Town" company, and his experience with stock company work has been gained since then in a half dozen different American cities. Previous to assuming stage management permanently he played with many of Charles Frohman's combinations and was for four seasons in the famous cast of the original production of "The Little Minister." His first association with the Boston Stock Company was as one of its members in August, 1897.

Later he became for five years its producing manager and while in Boston made countless friends who will be glad to welcome him back under such auspicious conditions. Mr. Giles, the managing director of the Boston Stock Company, has provided Mr. Masson with a strictly high-class company recruited from artists who have given him carte blanche in making scenic productions.

Mr. Masson has already placed under contract the best scenic artist and musical director obtainable, who will bring them to Boston with him in a few weeks and install them in the St. James Theatre preparatory to the opening Monday, August 29.

JOSIE FLYNN COMING

Josie Flynn, the best known lady mounted in vaudeville, a favorite on both continents, will return to Loew's Orpheum Theatre next week in an entirely new production, this time a big fashion revue, a suggestion of musical comedy.

The two stunning little dancing misses who were with Miss Flynn on the last tour of the Loew Circuit are still with her, and the numbers they offer, including a bridal number, in costumes of which are the last word, will long be remembered.

CIRCUS AT PARAGON IS FREE

Added Attraction at Beach Amusement Centre Is Billed for Balance of the Season

Paragon Park, at Nantasket, will present a circus performance as a part of its free out-of-door attractions for the balance of the season. Hill's comedy circus opening at the big South Shore amusement centre next Monday. The circus, a live organization with its cast jammed full of clever animals and funny clowns will add to the long list of free attractions which are presented for the park patrons, both on the stage at the pavilion and on the indoor stage of the famous Palm Gardens.

The quartet, which has attracted thousands from all over the country to the Palm Gardens this Summer, will be enlarged again for the balance of the season and an entirely new Summertime musical skit, directed by Ralph Crossen, will be presented during the remaining five weeks of the season.

In addition to Rae Kelsey, termed one of the cleverest dancers on the stage today; Francis Tait, the girl with the silver voice; Al Moore's famous naval band; Lambert's crack dance orchestra and others, the Paragon Revue boasts Miss Hatel Sears, the girl who was the first to wear the new feminine trousers costume on the streets of Boston. Miss Sears, one of the stars of the Paragon show, called on Mayor Peters during the past week at the city's chief executive declined her costume "great." It has attracted more than a little attention from the South Shore Summer folk, particularly among the women, among whom a warm controversy as to its merits and modesty is raging.

Special fireworks the three nights weekly for the balance of the season have been arranged by President Albert A. Golden and Treasurer David Stone of the Paragon Park Company.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

Sam Dody and Henry Berman, the popular laugh provokers, will head the program for the initial half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. Another topline act will be a versatile vaudeville triumph, "Dancing Supreme" featuring Hamilton, Calvert and Herman. Other acts will include Olive and Mack, in a refreshing musical interlude, "Oh! Clerkie"; Swor and Mack, in a rural comedy sketch, chattering skit; Connell and St. John in a singing, talking and dancing act of today; and Bicknell, the model baker. Shirley Mason will be shown in "Love-Thy," a delightful romance of the screen.

FIGHT FILM AT SCOLLAY SQUARE

A unique feature in motion picture entertainment will be offered at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia Theatre next week beginning Monday when movie films of the thrilling Sheylin-Kloby battle at Salem will be shown.

To watch films of the ring-to-ring battle is as fascinating as to sit at the ringside, while the gloved warriors clash. The camera was placed close to the ropes and every punch, each counter, block, and duck of the men is vividly registered on the films.

Throughout the ten rounds of furious fighting which are shown on the screen, Kloby Corcoran, the Yankee Division champion, puts up a splendid fight before the onslaughts of the scientific Dartmouth boxing instructor, Eddie Sheylin.

MARK HOGUE A SENSATION

The beauty of the illuminated plane which Mark C. Hogue and his Aerial Nomads pilot nightly over Revere Beach, with the powerful searchlight playing on it while it does all the daring rolls and loops known to the aviator, reaches its climax in a veritable shower of fireworks which the plane leaves trailing behind it as it vanishes in the darkness. Never in the aviator more like a bird than under cover of darkness when it is only his sense of direction that keeps him in the right path—but the danger is a hundred-fold greater than daylight flying. Mark Hogue, Buster Brown and William Bowen are creating a sensation the like of which Revere Beach spectators have never before experienced. The aerial program consists of daring exploits such as only Hogue has ever dared attempt and a sensational parachute drop by William Brown.

Plays That Remain

George M. Cohan's comedians in the musical comedy, "The O'Brien Girl," begin the last month of their remarkably popular engagement at the Tremont Theatre next Monday evening. It is apparent that the public at large is realizing that the end of this show's stay is drawing close because of the continued demand for seats even on the hottest days of the Summer.

COLONIAL IS TO REOPEN AUGUST 15

"A Wise Child," New Comedy by Rida Young, Will Be First Attraction of Season

The Colonial Theatre will open the season of 1921-1922 on Monday, August 15, with Charles Dillingham's production, "A Wise Child," a new comedy by Rida Johnson Young. The cast headed by Vivienne Segal includes such well-known players as Robert McWade, Douglas Stevenson, Charles Abbe, Walter Regan, Alice Mason, H. N. Lewan, Wright Kramer, Steve Enright, William Ingersoll, Beatrice Terraine and others.

A RUSSIAN INDIAN

In no other part of the globe you may travel in may will encounter some member of the large family of Russian Indians who have been trained in the leading opera houses of the cities and long will undoubtedly be clever exponents of the dancing entertainment art. Moreover, they will be found to handle the language of the land in which they are met with universal facility.

They are natural linguists, and in addition to this, they are taught several languages who have been through curriculum of the course of education at the borough as part of their training.

Which leads to the case of Alexander Volkoff of the "Only Girl" company at the Tremont Theatre, who, at the ripe old age of nine, he was accepted as a dancer because he was a well known artist who was also a dancer. He was a ballet at the Imperial Theatre in Petrograd in the days of the Czar, and who had traveled pretty much all over the world in dancing tours. But he is not a dancer by any means. He is able to handle a speaking part. His English is far from perfect, it is good, but they don't look upon dancers as speaking players.

George Cohan is in the process of improving the show in its early days thought of adding an Indian song and dance as well as having an Indian move through the show with some lines to speak. An actor really was found when Cohan bethought himself of Alexander Volkoff and half-hazardly asked the Russian if he thought he could play the part.

Upon the eager affirmation of Yakovleff he was given the role with the song and the result is one of the hits of the show. The Russian's first appearance in the Indian role and as his dancing is little short of wonderful Yakovleff is proving a real find. He is a character study, it seems, because in addition to his dancing specialty in the show he conducts a daily class with a few elect pupils schooling them in the art of the ballet. He is also an ardent student in all the days of the warm weather.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

Auto News and Notes

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

It is remarkable to notice how few drivers of automobiles observe the driving rules of the road. The only person in the car who is supposed to know just where that car is going is the driver, and he or she should give the signals, yet it is a very common thing to come up behind a touring car loaded with people and at a turn in the road hands appear on all sides, waving and flapping like a sea-gull coming to light.

The law states that signals must be given to warn the cars in the rear, except in case of an emergency stop where there is no time to give a signal. A great many of these emergency stops are made necessary because the car ahead turned to right or left without any warning. The car behind had to stop quickly to avoid accident.

It is a good custom to practise signals at every stop and turn, even if no car is behind. Get the habit of doing it and it becomes second nature, and driving becomes a pleasure for all.

BAY STATE A. A. TO HOLD GOLF TOURNAMENT

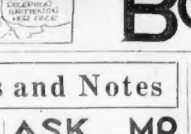
The Bay State Automobile Association will hold a golf tournament and "get together" at the Winchester Country Club next Monday. Alden L. Danforth and James A. Travers have charge of the handicapping and members will have to prove that they are entitled to the rations they will get.

Luncheon will be served at the club, but starting time must be chosen any time during the day. There are several few "ground rules," but this one will be absolutely enforced. "All contestants using the course after dark must be equipped with 'bon-glare' headlights and obey traffic rules at corners of intersecting or adjacent fairways," Mr. Travers says this rule has been found necessary from past experience.

TRUCK OWNERS AWAIT ACETYLENE DECISION

Practically every truck owner is vitally interested to know what decision has been made by the Department of Public Works (Registry of Motor Vehicles) relative to the use of acetylene lamps on both cars and trucks.

No official report has been received from the Highway Commission as to this writing, nevertheless J. F. Hathaway, chairman of the committee appointed by the Boston Commercial Motor Cabbie Association and the Boston Automobile Dealers Association, Inc., to investigate the situation, understands that assuming equipment will be approved, subject to conditions which will be announced later.



Dear Mr. Fixit:

I have a Ford touring car which has been running in excellent condition. For the last few days or so I no- tised that my motor will stall unless I keep it speeded up. I have not changed the mixture in my carburetor and am at a loss to know what the trouble is. A. L. D., Melrose.

Clean out the bowl of your carburetor as it is probably dirty. You may also have water in your gasoline. Either one of these two would cause the car to act as you have stated.

Dear Mr. Fixit:

I have a 1915 Buick 6-55 and my ammeter does not show any charge. Recently I have had to crank my motor to get it to start it. Any suggestion you can make will be greatly appreciated. H. C. W., Newton.

It is unsure that your generator is not charging. This is probably due to the fact that your brushes are either worn or dirty. Look carefully for this trouble and if it is not found you better have some trouble on it by our expert, unless you are competent to do this yourself.

Dear Mr. Fixit:

I recently bought a new Ford Sedan and it has started a squeaking noise on my right rear wheel. Would have to anything the matter with the universal joint? Also the gasoline gauge does not work. C. C., Dorchester.

Sometimes the emergency brakes rub against the brake drum, but this is nothing alarming. Smear a little oil in the drum and this should stop. Have gauge adjusted and eventually work out all right.

Dear Mr. Fixit:

Will you please tell me what a weak mixture causes, a morning back in the carburetor? I do not see how this can get by the inlet valve. H. W., Malden.

A weak mixture is naturally slow burning and some of it is still burning in the exhaust manifold when the next stroke opens the valve and the burning mixture ignites the incoming charge which causes it to explode back through the carburetor, as the inlet valve is open at that time and the exhaust is closed or just closing.

HOLDEN TO LEAVE CADILLAC COMPANY

F. M. Holden, research engineer of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, has resigned to join the engineering staff of H. H. Franklin, until recently president and general manager of the Franklin Company, and now head of the new company which manufactures air cor- bonizing Collins' exemplate.

Like the former Cadillac chief engineer, Holden is a Welsh and both graduate, W. R. Milner, whose affiliation with the Franklin Company was announced. Mr. Holden has returned to the office which he occupied for the last thirteen years, in the former Cadillac main plant, recently purchased by Mr. Collins.

RED SOX OWNER STILL "CONSIDERING" PROPOSAL TO SLASH HIS PRICES

The heat wave has broken. Not so with the high prices at the Red Sox park. Handsome Harry Frazee, financial man of the Boston club, is still "considering" Mayor Peters' proposal to slash prices at Fenway Park. Meanwhile those fans, who still have enough interest in the American League club that represents our fair city, are obliged to pay record prices.

Maybe if the Red Sox had a team which was up in the pennant fight the protest of the fans would not be so strenuous. They would naturally conclude that it costs real money to support a pennant contender. But with the Red Sox taking defeats in a nonchalant manner it is probably to be expected that Friend Fan should register a very loud protest against existing conditions.

Here is the scale of prices at Fenway Park:

Centre field bleachers, 55 cents.

First and third base bleachers, 85 cents.

Grandstand, $1.10.

Box seats, $1.65.

The chief financial move by Frazee was in placing the war tax burden entirely upon the fans. Then to make it a perfect tax the Red Sox owner collected a little revenue for himself. Under the old prices, for example, a seat in the first base bleachers sold for seventy-five cents. Then came the 10 per cent government tax.

Most clubs assumed this burden. The Braves were among them. Not so with the Red Sox. A 10 per cent tax on a seventy-five cent seat would be seven and a half cents. So as to make matters easy for his ticket sellers, Frazee made it a flat increase of ten cents, which nets him two and a half cents extra on each seventy-five cent seat.

The Boston American has obtained the price lists at other baseball parks. They should prove interesting to Frazee as well as to the baseball fans of Boston and New England.

St. Louis prices follow:

Bleachers, 50 cents.

Pavilion, 75 cents.

Unreserved grandstand, $1.

Three front rows grandstand, reserved, and rear row box seats, $1.25.

Front row box seats, $1.50.

Pittsburgh prices follow:

Right field bleachers, 50 cents.

Left field bleachers, 75 cents.

Admission to back rows of grandstand, $1.

First twelve rows of grandstand, $1.25.

Boxes, $1.50.

Philadelphia prices follow:

Bleachers, 50 cents.

Grandstand, $75 cents.

Pavilions, $1.25.

Boxes, $1.50.

Cleveland prices follow:

Bleachers, 50 cents.

Pavilion, 75 cents.

Grandstand, general admission, $1.

Grandstand, reserved seats, $1.25.

Box seats, $1.50.

Prices at the Polo Grounds for both the Giants and Yankees are as follows:

Bleachers, for first 500 fans, 55 cents.

Regular bleacher price, 75 cents.

Grandstand, upper and lower, $1.10.

Reserved seats, lower grandstand, $1.50.

BOSTON NET CHAMPION MEETS COAST STAR IN TENNIS FINAL

By ROBERT E. HARLOW

As classy a tennis match as the world affords was scheduled for the Chestnut Hill exhibition court at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, when R. Norris Williams, 2d, of Boston met William M. Johnson of California in the challenge round for the Longwood Bowl. Both players are former national champions.

Williams won his way to the challenge round by defeating a fast field. He was not pressed in any of his matches and as the final round, in which he defeated George Shimizu, the Japanese player, was contested under favorable weather conditions. Williams was in fine form as Johnston when the pair took the centre court.

By his play in this week Williams has indicated that he will be a factor in the national championship at Philadelphia in September, when his opponent of today, Bill Tilden, the present champion, and the youthful Vincent Richards are to be the favorites of a brilliant field. Today's match will give a line on the play of two of these favorites.

* * *

Johnston arrived at Longwood Thursday and practiced that day and yesterday afternoon. He appeared to be hitting the ball as hard as Williams and striking it as well.

* * *

He did not seem to have quite as good control as Williams, but that may be excused for because he was merely playing in practice matches and was taking more liberties in hitting than he would in competition.

* * *

R. Norris Williams 2d, hits a terrific ball, but hard for Zenzo Shimizu of Japan, and the American won the final round in the Longwood Bowl tournament at Chestnut Hill in straight sets 6—2, 7—5, 6—4. Williams and William Johnston, holder of the Bowl, will play the challenge round at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

* * *

The Shimizu-Williams match went the way many expected. Ichiya Kumagae Shimizu's partner, said before it began that Shimizu would have a fine baseline player, but that the fastest of the Americans would beat him at the net, and with their terrific serving. This was exactly what happened.

* * *

Williams was at his best. He hit the ball with terrific force and fine control and was too strong for Shimizu. He also had a tremendous advantage in service, for his fast balls scored repeated service aces, or bounced with such speed that the Japanese was lucky to make a safe return of them.

* * *

Shimizu's service is the weakest part of his game. In Japan and Europe, for many years, the serve has merely been a means of putting the ball in play. It was left to Americans who developed it as a strong offensive weapon. Shimizu has not made enough of the hard hitting American servers to be able to cope with the fast balls.

* * *

Kumagae, the other Japanese star, has changed his style of service and gets much more power than when he was over here last year. Shimizu, in order to be effective against our best players and hardest hitters, must adopt the smashing serve. His service against Williams was so light that Williams was able to strode the ball for a placement, or hit it so hard that Shimizu was immediately put on the defence, when he should have taken the offence.

* * *

The Japanese was within a point of winning the second set, which Williams finally took at 7-5. At no time was there any doubt that the former American champion would win the match, it was an interesting contest and demonstrated beyond question the value of speed.

* * *

Shimizu, immediately the match was finished, doffed his white hat, shook hands with Williams and then with the referee. He also went back on the courts for a double match. Shimizu said that he had never seen the Longwood Bowl so fast, with such speed as Williams hit it.

SUMMARY:

LONGWOOD BOWL, SINGLES.
Final Round.

R. Norris Williams 2d, of Boston defeated Zenzo Shimizu of Japan, 6—2, 7—5, 6—4.

LONGWOOD DOUBLES.
Semi-Final Round.

Bidwell and Parker beat Hill and Hill by 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

Schmidt and Johnson beat Tennyson, 6—1, 6—2.

PLATTS HAS NEVER BEEN KNOCKED OFF HIS FEET

By JACK CONWAY.

Charley Harvey, who has piloted more winning fighters than the majority of the leaders in the art of managing ring men, says Gus Platti will prove a greater sensation than Owen Moran, Jem Driscoll, Freddy Welsh or Joey Bowker. It will be remembered that Harvey brought the men mentioned to the United States.

Harvey has so much faith in the wonderful fighting qualities of Platti that he has signed the European middleweight champion to meet Mike Gibbons of St. Paul in a ten-round bout at the Arena A. C. next Friday night. Harvey considers Gibbons the world's greatest middleweight and believes that if Platti can win a decision over the St. Paul man he will have established him as an international fighting figure.

* * *

Harvey sheds some light on Platti fighting qualities in the following letter:

"I would like to say a few words in behalf of my new fighter, Gus Platts, middleweight champion of Europe and who won the title recently when he knocked out Tom Gummer, holder of the Lord Lonsdale belt in six rounds at the National Sporting Club of London.

"I am not exaggerating one particle when I make the statement that I think Platts is the greatest fighter that I ever handled and will prove to be a sensation in America. I perhaps realize better than you how strong this is when it is a well-known fact that I brought out the following boys, Owen Moran, Jem Driscoll, Joey Bowker, and Freddie Welsh.

* * *

"When I offered an open challenge to the best middleweight in America I do not expect to have the good fortune to get a chance at the greatest of them all, Mike Gibbons of St. Paul, and to a decision.

* * *

"When I say the greatest of them all you will perhaps be surprised that I do not include Wilson the champion. I don't do this for the following reasons: I do not consider Wilson a great fighter and if he was one he would have accepted my offer to meet Platts as I offered him the same money to do so that he received for boxing O'Dowd. The only stipulation that I made was that it would have to be a decision. That let me right out.

* * *

"I want to say further regarding Platts that he has fought over 100 contests and has never been knocked off his feet. Platts knocked out Young McCormack, who was managed by this side by Billy Gibson, and he, while here, knocked out Battling Levinsky.

* * *

"Platts was born in Sheffield, England, is twenty-seven years old, as that he will have the advantage of years on Gibbons. He is a sturdy husky built boy of the Tom Sharkey type who can give and take hard punches and in addition knows boxing thoroughly like the rest of the English fighters. He is training at Grupp's gymnasium with Al Reich, Frankie Flemming and Mike McTigue and weighs at present 156 pounds but will enter the ring with Gibbons at 155.

* * *

"I know that there is a great population of Irish in Boston who would naturally like to see Gibbons win, but I am sure that the English fans present that in my opinion Platts will be entitled to a winner. In closing I would say that when Lord Kitchener issued the first call for volunteers in 1914 Gus Platts was one of the first to enlist. He was also the hottest pest of the fighting, was shot through the shoulder in action and is still in the hospital for two months so that he is a genuine fighting fighter soldier."

* * *

Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight king, is not on the card at Pete Herman and Joe Lynch's Providence bill, as two wins over Young Montreal is certainly entitled to a crack at the bantamweight crown.

In the past five months Young Montreal of Providence has received two referees' decisions over Pete Herman, the present title holder, and in the same time Friedman has received two referees' decisions over Young Montreal, so "why isn't Friedman the most logical contender for a crack at the bantamweight king?

* * *

In the past three years Friedman has met every bantamweight of class with marked success, and any one of the promoters picked for him by fight experts would be tough nuts to crack. Friedman is also showing an abundance of class, and being now rated with the best in the country.

When Lynch was champion he never would consent to meet Friedman in a decision bout or a nodecision bout, and the simple reason that Friedman gave Lynch three artistic lacings before he was champion and Joe never forgot them.

Friedman is twenty-two years old, born and raised in the South End, Boston city, of poor parents, and he has been supporting his mother and brother for some years past. He was like Yum around New York, he never had a chance, so he moved to Boston two years ago, and has been winning over all comers and making a name for himself in New England throughout New England rings.

* * *

Eddie Mack, Friedman's manager, is willing to give any man $7,500 and 40 per cent. of the house to do battle with Friedman for the title, or two weeks, and he will give Joe Lynch $2,500 and 30 per cent. of the gate to do battle within the same time. If Herman or Lynch will not accept either bantamweight king, Friedman will battle any other bantamweight in the country the promoters pick for him, first come first served.

SMITH BATTLE FOR MONTREAL IN NEW YORK

Providence Boy in Line for Bout With Lynch and Herman

New York, July 30.—Young Montreal of Providence, R. I., is coming here on August 16 to battle Midget Smith in a ten-round bout at the Boxing Drome, in the Bronx. Montreal has been one short step from being recognized as the world's bantam champion several times.

If he whips Smith Young Montreal has been promised another meeting with Lynch. If Montreal wins from Lynch he will get first crack at Herman.

The matching of Young Montreal and Midget Smith completes the card for August 16. The other ten-rounders arranged are: Johnny Dundee vs. Charlie White of Chicago; Marty Cross vs. Paul Doyle and Johnny Buff, flyweight champion, vs. Charley Ledoux, bantam champion of France.

CUBS GO DOWN FOR FIFTH STRAIGHT DEFEAT

Chicago, Ill., July 30.—The fastest Phillies inaugurated their five-game series with the Cubs yesterday with an easy victory, 6 to 2, behind the gilt edge curving of George Hubbell. By romping the opener the Quakers sent Chicago down to the fifth straight defeat.

Hubbell, who trimmed the Cubs recently in Philadelphia, granted only eight hits, while the visitors slammed York for five drives and four runs in three innings.

Mamon stopped the onslaught, surrendering only three safe hits and two-thirds innings.

An error by Merrill, following a pass and a hit, gave the enemy two more runs in the ninth.

Big Game on Sunday

Allston fans are anxiously marking time for the much talked of Allston-Malden Ranger game scheduled for Sunday at 2:30 p. m. This game has been burning for the past few weeks and is bound to attract a large attendance. It will be played at the Allston street playground.

Golf at Lexington

A handicap vs. par event is staged this afternoon over the links of the Lexington Golf Club in North Lexington. Match play in the president's trophy tournament will also continue.

Revere Offers Special Series of Races Tonight

Bike Card At Revere

60 Mile Motor Paced Race, Series Championship Medley Relays, Special Series, Oscar Egg, world's champion, vs. Willie Coburn, Professional and Amateur sprint races.

Oscar Egg of Switzerland, champion unpaced rider of the world and Willie Coburn, winner of the New York six day race last winter, top the bill at the Revere Cycle track tonight in a special series of races.

The men will sprint in the first heat, a competition that should prove the brilliant Egg. The second heat will be at ordinary style, a form of racing at which Coburn is the pet of all. A toss of the coin will decide the nature of the third heat, if necessary.

Egg has been a brilliant performer on the Newark track. He gained fame as a pursuit rider. Like Coburn the Swiss can do anything astride a bicycle. He has been seen at two styles of racing at Revere this season—pace following and pursuit racing.

Johnny Farding in five laps in their pursuit race.

The main feature will bring out the great Georges Seres, in a 60 mile motor-paced race against George Wiley, George Chapman and Charley Verkerk the Belgian. Seres has fully recovered from his recent injuries and is anxious to hang up new figures for 40 miles.

The Frenchman will have to be at his best against Wiley and Chapman. Wiley seems to no better when he comes from behind. As Seres is fast getting away George will have uphill work.

The professionals and amateurs will engage in special sprint races in addition to the two main features tonight.

WOODLAND PLAYER IN PITTSFIELD GOLF

Pittsfield, July 30.—R. C. Vanderdale of Woodland played in the semi-final round of the open golf tournament at the Pittsfield Country Club today. He won his first round match at the nineteenth hole from Gaines and defeated R. H. Smith of Winchester 6 and 5 in the afternoon. Vanderdale met Carter this morning.

1st Baseman O'Connell Will Cost Some Club Lot of Money

Tom Stout, president of the Southern Colorado club, says $12,000 would not buy Jim O'Connell, the first baseman, and when he explains why, his point of view is clear.

"In the first place says the Frisco magnate, 'half the purchase would have to be paid to Uncle Sam. Then no one would agree to pay a man to take O'Connell's place, he'd probably cost $19,000 before he was finished.

"As a drawing card O'Connell is a big asset that would be lost. Figure it all out and $12,000 is not enough to make a deal attractive."

However if some major league club, at the end of the season, will agree to give O'Connell a trial and furnish a capable substitute for him, Stroh will not stand in the way of his advancement.

K. OF C. LEAGUE HAS FIVE GAMES TODAY

Mt. Pleasant vs. Canton at Canton.
Rose Croix vs. Dorchester Lower Mills at Ashmont.
Jamaica Plain vs. Mattapan at Norfolk Street Grounds.
J. J. Chittick vs. Dedham at Stone Post, Dedham.
Quincy vs. Shawmut at Franklin Field.

The "Newton independents," composed of college and high school players, have a few open dates for twilight and Saturdays away from home, and wish to hear from managers looking for a good attraction. Dolan of Brown, Barnes of Waltham High, Adams of Newton High, and Smith of Brown are among the players. Manager John D. Earle, No. 257 Church street, Newton, Mass., or phone Cambridge 6146.

The Boston All-Stars, under the management of Art Wholley, the old R. C. outfielder, are making a wonderful record on the diamond this year, having won 12 out of 17 games played thus far.

The Boston All-Stars wish to make the announcement that they have never played in Concord, and the team that played there a few days ago are not the real Boston All-Stars. The Boston All-Stars' usual line-up is as follows: Behn and Wing, pitchers; Jenkins, Nelson and O'Leary, catchers; Charley Fitzgerald, 1b.; Al Mullen, 2b.; Ikker Hoefling, ss.; Al Dietzen, 3b.; Nelson or O'Leary, lf.; Bill Connihin, c.f., and Art Wholley, r.f.

Red Hoffman, formerly of the Revere City team and now free-lancing among the semi-pros, is twirling for the Nationals of Lynn in their game against the Saxony Mills nine at the latter's grounds today. After his brilliant performance against the Arlington Town team, to which he allowed one hit, his services are demanded by the strongest teams in the State.

PIRATES FEAR BRAVES IN BIG HOME SERIES

By NICK FLATLEY.

Pittsburgh, July 20.—This some what important series having been trisected by rain, the Braves now have but a chance to catch up a couple of games on the staggering Pirates. The contest that was to have been played yesterday was tossed ahead until the next visit of the Hitchmen to this part of the world. They come into Augusta and hang around for four days, so will have plenty of time for one barnacle date.

The shock the Giants threw into the local camp by collecting three games out of four has rather cooled the Pirate confidence, and the native clan isn't anxious to assume any more tough battles in the immediate future than are called for by law.

* * *

The Friday showers ceased as soon as the game was called off, though Barney Dreyfuss waited until 5 and 2 o'clock before putting up the sign. They have a big canvas cover here that protects the field against anything but cloudbursts.

* * *

According to the turnstile guardians, a capacity crowd was to be out yesterday to have a look at the Braves, who gave the Pirates such a surprising time back in Boston got long ago. It was the prize contest the Gibbys had to wage to edge out the Braves that started Pittsburgh thinking that perhaps Maranville and company might not have the pennant handed to them on a silver platter.

* * *

The Braves have lost a pretty good flock of games by the post-ponement, as the locals streaked 15,000 or so such afternoons as that the Giants were present, and the Boston outfit is considered just as good a drawing card.

* * *

Manager Mitchell has come to the conclusion that the double defeat in Cincinnati didn't hurt his team a bit. His explanation is interesting and seems to have a lot of truth tucked around the edges. "We are now six games back of the Pirates," declared Sir Frederick, "one game nearer the top than when we left home."

* * *

"When we were beaten by Pittsburgh in Boston we started out with just the same margin between us. The Pirates have won ten out of five from us, and we have lost a double-header to the Reds in little more than a week and yet we are no farther from the roof than we were before that trouble."

* * *

"There was a slump coming in the Braves. No team in the world can keep on winning forever. The slump came, and there was no loss of position. It's only natural to expect that things will run themselves out quickly and we'll get going once more. Then we'll start to climb."

* * *

"I think our position now a little better than it was before the Pittsburgh series. Up to that time the team was a doubtful quantity. It had never faced the big test. It went through that series without a falter. Two merely mechanical errors lost two ball games, but apart from that the Braves played better and smarter baseball than the Pirates."

* * *

The players know now they have the class to stay up with the leaders. There's no question in their own minds. They have the confidence that only comes with experience. It's a long drive down the Schedule, and six games isn't such a gap. A little winning streak will melt it right down. And when you think it over, Fred explains several mouthfuls.

* * *

Captain William Southworth is very glad to have escaped from Cincinnati. According to Will, the Red Park has been his jinx ever since he walked into the National League. He claims he never has had a good day there yet. He's had many a one here.

* * *

Big Jack Scott, you may have observed, has been winning frequently and is now in a position to establish one of those records if he can attach a few more triumphs to his record. The awkward right hander has now chalked up six in a row and is going stronger all the time. His last two efforts, against the Pirates and Reds, were really two of the best games he has ever chucked.

* * *

John started winning over in Philadelphia when the Braves were last on the road. He got away with a 3-2 game there in extra innings. He came to Boston and beat the Cubs 5 to 0, the Reds 2 to 1, and the Pirates by the same score, holding the latter to three hits. He started against St. Louis, but was knocked out of the box in the first chapter. Fillingim succeeded him and the Braves bombarded their way through to victory, thereby keeping a defeat off the Scott book.

* * *

Big John went into the Brooklyn game last Sunday, with the score tied, pitched two innings and emerged with the Hitchmen ahead and thereby got the credit of the win.

* * *

Then he took the Reds into camp Thursday, 2-1. Scotty started to win both games when Frank Gibson was elected to catch him. Somehow the pair worked very smoothly. Their record to date is eleven wins against two losses, which is about as good a mark as any one battery in the league has established.

* * *

Joe Oeschger, who hasn't exactly overworked in the last fortnight, was to open the series against the Pirates yesterday. Joe likes the Pirate park, has incidentally been to win ball games. He was on the high road to glory, when Wilbur Cooper got him down back home, and he's anxious to start another string of victories.

* * *

Joe claims that his real fast ball, which was missing most of the season, has returned, his souper profiting by the broiling sun that beat down upon the Cincinnati diamonds in Redland. The showers broke the torrid spell here, though its bet enough to loosen up any muscles that happen to be a bit stiff.

GOLFERS LIKE FLAG TAVERN COURSE

No Long Waits at Cunningham's Semi-Public Links in Weston

By Robert E. Harlow

Golfers who do not wish to have their game interrupted by long waits should take a spin out to the Flag Tavern Golf Club, in Weston. It is a real semi-public links in Massachusetts.

* * *

Steve Cunningham has worked wonders on his course. The nine holes are in very playable condition and a number of golfers have made his club their golfing headquarters.

* * *

Cunningham has built a locker room with shower baths, close by the first tee.

* * *

Dr. C. M. Haskell, Newton Highlands, is the present holder of the amateur record for the nine holes. He has been round in 45. Cunningham is anxious for some of the low handicap golfers to try his course and see what sort of a mark they can set up.

* * *

The course is but a few minutes' walk from the Cherry Brook station, on the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine railroad, and one mile from the Weston station.

* * *

Bob Macdonald of the Bob O'Link Club of Chicago won the metropolitan open golf championship at the Siwanoy Club, Mount Vernon, N. Y., with a total of 294 for the seventy-two holes. He had a four shot lead over Pat O'Hara of Richmond County, who was second with 298.

* * *

R. C. Van Arsdale of Woodland was the only Boston golfer to qualify in the first sixteen in the Pittsfield tournament. The first round of match play was today.

* * *

J. A. Cammons, Wannamoisett, was the only New England golfer to reach the last eight in the Eleventh Country Club tournament at Manchester.

* * *

There will be a three-day open tournament of the Massachusetts Golf Association at Great Barrington next week, beginning Thursday and a two-day medal play tournament at Hatherly Friday and Saturday.

CARDINALS SCORE ONLY RUN ON McHENRY'S HOMER

St. Louis Mo., July 20.—A home run by McHenry over the left field fence gave the Cardinals a 1 to 0 victory over Brooklyn in the opening game of the series yesterday.

It was Pfeffer's second victory against his former team since joining the Cardinals. Only two base runners passed second on him, Olson in the first and again in the ninth. Barring McHenry's home run the Cards had but two base runners, Clemons on a single in the first and McHenry on a single in the seventh.

Wrestling in Japan

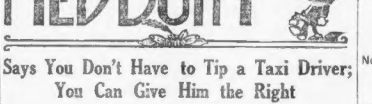
San Francisco, July 20.—Wrestling is the only sport recognized in Japan and as Taiko there are in that country seasons of twenty days each, according to Jersey Weber, of Portland, Ore., who was in the Orient for several months.

The tournaments are held in May and January in a specially built arena, within which about 10,000 can be seated. This arena is open only during the two months of the wrestling season and seats 20,000 spectators.

Not After Buck Weaver

Cincinnati, July 20.—Manager McGraw of the Giants denied that he is after Buck Weaver.

MEDBURY



Says You Don't Have to Tip a Taxi Driver; You Can Give Him the Right Change and Run

Tipping in this country is being overdone. It's getting so that you can't ask a man the direction to the poorhouse without giving him a quarter for telling you.

You ride in a taxicab and you've got to tip the driver. You don't have to tip him; you can give him the right change and then run.

If you catch a burglar in your house at night you are trained to tip him because he was careful and only broke one window getting into your apartment.

Whenever you get any work done at a barber shop you have to tip the barber. If you kick about giving it to him he'll tell you that it wasn't his fault that you needed a haircut.

He cuts you for nothing and all you're paying for is the court plaster.

You go into a restaurant and it doesn't cost you a dime to check your hat. You don't have to give the check boy a quarter; you can go home barehanded if you want.

When you eat a meal you have to tip the waiter. Money talks, but he isn't on speaking terms with anything less than half a dollar.

If you ask the waiter if a quarter would be all right for a tip he'll tell you he'd like to take that much but you aren't afford it.

The restaurant's motto is, "Put it on the plate," but the waiter's motto is, "Put it under the plate."

You never see him when you want him. The only time he hangs around is after he gives you the change.

A messenger boy brings you a telegram telling you that you've lost every cent in the world, and you're supposed to give him a quarter because he risked to get the telegram to you as quickly as he could.

You never have to tip a phone girl, but you have to put three or four nickels in the coin slot before you get your number.

It's fifty-fifty, though. While you don't get your number, the phone company gets your nickel.

You have to do a lot of tipping on the trains, too. You tell the porter you'll give him a dollar if he wakes you up at seven o'clock in the morning, and he calls you three times during the night to tell you that he hasn't forgotten.

Money talks again, but this time it talked too much.

Some people get so used to tipping that they hate to get any service from a dumbwaiter without leaving a dime on it.

No matter where you go or where you ride you've always got to tip. There's only one chauffeur you'll never have to tip, and that's the guy who drives the hearse you're riding in.

GIANTS BEHIND PIRATES BUT HALF GAME

Victory Over Cincinnati Puts Them Closer to Leaders

Cincinnati, O., July 20.—The Giants won a ragged game from the Reds today, 10 to 7, by pounding Geary for three runs in the ninth after Neale's single and Bohn's triple, with two out, had tied the score for Cincinnati in the ninth.

Errors gave New York five runs. John McGraw's augmented outfit yesterday and he will direct the Giants in a double header today.

A double header was scheduled for yesterday but the first game was postponed until Sunday on account of wet grounds.

SUNDAY GAME FOR CASEY'S NEPONSET ALL-STARS

Casey's Neponset All-Stars will play the Milton Town team tomorrow afternoon at the Neponset Playgrounds. "Bill" Phelan of Milton High will pitch for his victors, while King of Cardinal A. A. or "Johnnie" Murphy of West Quincy will twirl for the All-Stars.

"Pat" Kelly and "Mike" Murray of St. Ambrose's, "Luther" McKenney, "Bosco" Kelly, "Dick" Casey and Marco of West Quincy will also be in the lineup for the All-Stars.

DUGAN ALL DONE WITH CELLAR CHAMPIONS

Athletics' Third Sacker Declares He Will Quit Game If Not Traded

New Haven, Ct., July 20.—"Tell my friends I am through with Connie Mack and his Athletics for all time. I'm tired of playing with a tail-ender. I've asked him to trade or sell me to some other club and told him I'd not forget baseball and try other means of livelihood if he did not do so. I'll close other jobs outside of baseball if I don't hear from him."

So said Joe Dugan, third baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, today from New York, where he is awaiting word from Manager Connie Mack, having left Philadelphia yesterday.

Bedient's Big Day

Hugh Bedient, formerly of the Red Sox, but on a big day for himself at St. Paul recently. He gave the Saints their first whitewash of the year and he helped to win his game 7 to 0 by hitting a homer, a double and a single.

Van Gent Is Head Coach

A. E. (Gene) Van Gent has been appointed head football coach at Stanford University, California. He will be assisted by Professor Jim Canning as line coach, Dick Templeton as kicking coach and Walter Powell as physical athletic director.

YALE GRID MEN TO TRAIN AT GALE'S FERRY

New Haven Football Leaders to Have Camp at Home of Crews

New Haven, Ct., July 20.—Yale will make a radical departure in its football training plans this Fall, by transferring the preliminary work from New Haven and from Yale Field.

Instead, however, of ordering the squad to some shore or mountain resort, as many universities are doing, the Eli officials have decided to establish a gridiron training camp at Gales Ferry, where for more than thirty years Yale oarsmen have spent a month in finishing their training for their rowing races with Harvard.

The present plan is for the football squad to go to Gales Ferry September 6, three days before the Labor Day, and remain till about September 15, the week before the opening of the Fall term at Yale.

The coaches, candidates for the eleven and the trainers will compose a squad of nearly a hundred, and this number may be exceeded before the round leaves the banks of the Thames.

There are possible accommodations for more than 150 persons in the different Gales Ferry quarters.

The Yale navy owns the plant at Gales Ferry, having bought it item by item for a total cost of about $20,000. It is now valued at more than $100,000.

Only the construction of a football field for practice remains to be done at Gales Ferry, and it is ready for the football players. This detail will be accomplished during August, it is expected.

EVERY PLACE ON NAVY FOOTBALL TEAM OPEN

Annapolis, Md., July 20.—There is much talk of football at the Naval Academy despite the hot weather. While the regulars of last year to eight positions will again be available every place on the team is regarded as open if a better man can be found.

It is declared that the navy never has had such an array of high grade backfield material as that which will be out at the disposal of Coach Folwell when the season opens.

Of the sixteen trained backs of last season only two have gone, and there are some additional good material in the season's squad and in the new plebe class.

Guyon Passes Exams

Washington, July 20.—Charles Guyon, athletic coach at Eastern High School last year, who has been considering an offer to instruct boxers at Washington University, St. Louis, now says he will remain at Eastern this Fall.

Guyon has been notified unofficially that he passed the physical directors' examinations for a permanent position here and is likely to avail himself of the opportunity to return, for Eastern wants him again.

Guyon now is umpiring in the South Atlantic League.

"Porter-House" Steak

THE origin of "porter-house" steak is traceable to the early part of the last century, when ale and porter were the favorite beverages at restaurants known as porter-houses. Having had a fine steak a patron called it porter-house and the name spread.

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

Dick Quarren, society idler and spendthrift, but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Stretch Leeds. She has had one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her advent into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wycherly, wins an hour out of her life on a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do. She tells him there can be not'ing serious between them, but she asks him to always think well of her. The Dankmere galleries are opened and Quarren takes a few days off at Witch-Hollow, Stretch tells him she is to marry Langley Sprowl. He tells her that he loves her. Stretch refuses to him the story of her marriage to Leeds. He returns to town and finds Westguard giving a lively party in the art gallery. Quarren hires a pretty stenographer.

"NO."

"You'd tell me if there was, wouldn't you?"

She lifted her dark eyes to his. "Yes," she said.

How much of an expert he was at judging faces he did not know, but he was perfectly satisfied with himself when she took her leave.

And when Dankmere came in after luncheon he said:

"I've engaged a bookkeeper. Her name is Jessie Vining. She's evidently unhappy, poor, undersized and the prettiest thing you ever saw out of a business college. So, being unhappy, poor, undersized and pretty, I take it that she's all to the good."

"It's a generous world of men," said Dankmere—"so I guess she is good."

"I'm sure of it. She was Sprowl's private stenographer—and he sent her away. . . . There are three reasons why he might have dismissed her. I've taken my choice of them."

"Did he give her a letter?"

"No."

"Oh. Then I've taken my choice, too."

Stretch ventured to give her a letter," said Quarren. "I've heard that Kyte could be decent sometimes."

"I see."

Nothing further was said about the new bookkeeper. His lordship went into the back parlor and played the piano until satisfied, then mixed himself a lime julep.

That afternoon they went over the reports of the assets very carefully. From these reports and his own conclusions, Quarren drafted a catalogue, while Dankmere went about sticking adhesive labels on the frames, all numbered. And as he trotted blithely about his work, he talked to himself and to the pictures:

"Here's number nine for you, old lady! If I'd had a face like that I'd have killed the artist who transferred it to canvas. . . . Number thirteen for you there in your armor! Somebody in Springfield will buy you for an ancestor and that's what will happen to you. . . . And you too, in a bag-wig!—you'll be some rich Yankee's ancestor before you know it! That's the way you'll end, my smirking friend. . . . Hello! Tiens! In Gottes namen—who have we here? Why, it's Velvet! . . . And hot weather is no excuse for going about that way! . . . Listen to this, Quarren, for an impromptu patter-song—

"'Venus, dear, you ought to know
What the proper caper is—
Even Eve, we won't allow,
Robbed the neighbors' grapefruit!
Even Maenads on the go,
Fat Bacchantes in a row—
Don't indulge in a show
Wear some threads of nageries!'

Through the heavens planet-strewn,
Where a shred of vapor is,
Quickly clothes herself the Moon!
Get you to a modiste soon
Where the tissue paper is
Cut in fashions fit for June—
Wear 'em, dear, for draperies!'—

"Good heavens!" protested Quarren—"how long can you run on like that?"

"Years and years, my dear fellow. It's in me—born in me! Can you beat it? Though I appear to be a poor appearance is a liar; cast for a part apart from caste, departing I shall turn toward the boards to bore the hordes and lord it, sock and buskwin dispensing sweetness, art and light as per our old friend Ruskin—"

"Dankmere!"

"Heaven-born!"

"Stop!"

A Franz Hals.

"I remain put. . . . What number do I stick on this gentleman with streaky features?"

"Eighteen. That's a Frans Hals."

"Really?"

"Yes; the records are all here, and the experts agree."

His lordship got down nimbly from the step-ladder and came over to the desk.

"Young sir," he said, "how much is that picture worth?"

"All we can get for it. It's not a very good example."

"Are you going to tell people that?"

"If they ask me," said Quarren, smiling.

"What price are you going to put on it?"

"Ten thousand."

"And do you think any artsmitten ass will pay that sum for a thing like that?"

"I think so, if it were only a decent example I'd ask ten times that—and probably get it in the end."

Dankmere inspected the picture more respectfully for a few moments, then pasted a label on an exquisite head by Greuse.

"She's a peach," he said. "What price is going to waft her from my roof-tree?"

"The experts say it's not a Greuse, but a contemporary copy. And there's no pedigree, either."

"Oh," said the Earl blandly, "is that your opinion, too?"

"I haven't any, yet. But there's no such picture by Greuse extant."

"You don't think it a copy?"

DRAWN BY CHARLES DANA GIBSON

Pretty Miss Vining, the Typist with Whom Dankmere Falls in Love

"I'm inclined not to. Under that thick blackish-yellow varnish I believe I'll find the pearly and rose texture of old Greuse himself. In the meantime it's not for sale."

"I see. And this battle scene?"

"Wouverman's—ruined by restoring. It's not worth much."

"And this Virgin?"

"Pure as the Virgin herself—not a mark—flawless. It's by the Master of the Death of Mary.' Isn't it a beauty? Do you notice St. John holding the three cherries and the Christ-child caressing the goldfinch? Did you ever see such color?"

"It's—er—pretty," said his lordship.

And so during the entire afternoon they compiled the price-list and catalogue, marking copies for what they were, noting such pictures as had been ruined by restoring or repainted so completely as to almost obliterate the last original brush stroke.

Also Quarren reserved for his own investigations such canvases as he doubted or of which he had hopes—a number that under their crocked, battered, darkened or discolored surfaces hinted of by-gone glories that might still be living and only imprisoned beneath the thick opacity of dust, soot, varnish and the repainting of many years ago.

And that night he went to bed happier than he had ever been in all his life—unless his moments with Stretch Leeds might be termed happy ones.

Monday morning brought, among other things, a cloudless sun, and little Miss Vining quite as spotless and radiant, and within ten minutes the click of the typewriter made the silent picture-plastered rooms almost gay.

"That's the Girl"

In shirtwaist and cuffs she took her place behind the desk with a sort of silent devotion which seemed at once to invest her with superunity over all that corner of the Dankmere domain. Coming in a little later, whistling merrily and twirling his walking stick, sheered off instinctively on his breezy progress through the rooms, skirting Jessie Vining's domain as though her private ensign flew above it and earthworks, cannon and trespass notices flanked her corner on every side.

In the back parlor he said to Quarren: "Do like the girl!"

"It sure is."

"Glad those my avoil She acts as though she had just bought the whole place."

"What's she doing?"

"Just sitting there," admitted Dankmere.

He seemed to have lost his spirits. Once, certain that he was unobserved except by Quarren, he ventured to balance his stick on his chin, but it was a half-hearted performance; and when he tossed up his straw hat and attempted to catch it on his head he missed, and the corrugated brim sustained a dent.

A number of people called that morning, quiet, well-dressed, cautious-eyed, soft-spoken gentlemen who moved about noiselessly over the carpets and, on encountering one another, nodded with silent familiarity and smiles scarcely perceptible.

They seemed to require no information concerning the pictures which they swept with glances almost careless on their first rounds of the rooms. But the first leisurely tour always resulted in a second where one or two pictures seemed to claim their closer scrutiny.

Now and then one of these gentlemen would screw a jeweler's glass into his eyes and remain a few minutes, nose almost touching a canvas. Several used the large reading glass lying on a side table.

Before they departed all glanced over the incomplete scals of prices which Jessie Vining had typed and bound in blue covers; but one and all took their leave in amiable silence, giving a non-committal word or two to Quarren in pleasantly modulated voices and passing Jessie's desk with a grave inclination of gently preoccupied faces.

When the last leisurely lingerer had taken his leave Quarren said to Jessie Vining:

"Those are representatives of various first-class dealers—confidential buyers, sometimes dealers themselves—like that handsome, gray-haired, young-looking man, who is Max von Ebers, head of that great house."

"But they didn't buy one single thing!" said Jessie.

Quarren laughed. "People don't buy off-hand. Our triumph is to get them here at all. I wrote to each of them personally."

All Sorts of Agents.

Nobody came for a long while; then one or two of the lesser dealers appeared, and now and then a man who might be an agent or a speculator, or possibly amateur or perhaps one of the curious haunters of all art marts who never buy, but never miss assisting at all inaugurations in persons—like an ubiquitous and silent dog who turns up wherever more than two people assemble with any purpose in view—or without any.

During the forenoon and early afternoon several women came into the galleries; and they seemed to be a little different from ordinary women, although it would be hard to say wherein they were different except in one instance—a tall, darkly handsome girl whose jewelry was as conspicuously oriental as her brilliant color.

Later Quarren told Jessie Vining that they were expert buyers on commission or brokers having clients among those very wealthy people who bought pictures now and then because it was fashionable to do so.

Also, these same women brokers represented a number of those unhappy old families who, incognito, were being forced, by straitened circumstances to part secretly with heirlooms—family plate, portraits, miniatures, furniture—even with the antique mirrors on the walls and the very fire-dogs on the hearth amid the ashes of a burnt-out race almost extinct.

A few Jews came—representing the extreme types of the most wonderful race of pople in the world—one tall, handsome, immaculate young man whose cultivated accent, charming manners, and quiet bearing challenged exception—and one or two representing the other extreme, loud, restless, aggressive and as impertinent as they dared to, discussing the canvases in noisy voices and with callous manners verging always on the offensive.

These evinced a disposition for cash deals and bargain-wrangling, discouraged good-naturedly by Quarren, who referred them to the catalogue.

Dankmere sidled up to Quarren rather timidly toward the close of the afternoon.

"I don't see what bally good I am in this business," he said. "I don't mean to pitch Quarren, but there doesn't seem to be anything for me to do. I think that all these bogus dealers will be a picturesque the moment they lay eyes on me, and the whole thing falls on you."

A TOUCH OF HIGH LIFE

STORY OF A GIRL'S SOCIETY ASPIRATIONS

By Ruth Logan

"JERRY, you'll think I am an impossible snob, but, dear, I'm sick and tired of this humdrum existence. I like you. You know that I haven't looked at any other man since we met. But try to understand when I mean when I say that if I had the opportunity to meet men of another world I would stand a chance to be somebody. Unless a girl is born in the social world, or goes on the stage, she has no chance to meet men who would probably care for her if they knew her."

"I know what you mean," answered the young man sadly.

"That's a dear," she whispered, stroking his hair as she stepped back of his chair. "And Jerry, if you'd just remember to call me Sari instead of Sarah. It makes such a difference, you know. It seems to give me another personality."

Strode Into Office

An hour later he strode into the office of Haines & Hartwell, and asked to speak to Mr. Hartwell.

"Well, Jerry, old man," said Nelson Hartwell, rising from his chair to offer a friendly hand to an old college mate. "Haven't seen or heard of you since we left Princeton. Why haven't you looked me up?"

Jerry launched into his story about Sarah, remembering to call her Sari as she had asked. "And all she needs, poor child, is a chance to meet real people. She has met your sister through some charity organization and I thought perhaps you'd be willing to ask your sister to be a trifle friendly and give Sari a chance."

At 8:30 that evening Jerry and Nelson Hartwell alighted from the Hartwell car in front of the Fenwick residence. Sari met them at the door, more beautiful than she had ever been before, Jerry thought.

Nelson Hartwell devoted himself to the girl and complimented her as she sang and played for them and later served a tempting supper from a chafing dish.

Sari's eyes glittered with happiness and when Mr. Hartwell assured her that he must bring his sister to call she fairly bubbled over with enthusiasm.

At noon the following day Mr. Hartwell called Sari on the telephone.

"I've got to go," she answered. "It's so good of you to think of me."

"We are leaving the city at five o'clock Saturday afternoon," he went on. "I'll call for you, if that's satisfactory."

"Quite. And, Mr. Hartwell, you won't think me rude when I ask who is chaperoning the party."

The voice on the other end of the wire laughed. "Not rude, but old-fashioned. As a matter of fact, we hadn't thought of taking a chaperon. This is the twentieth century, you know."

Sari gasped. "Is your sister going?"

"Er—well—no. She doesn't care to leave the city."

"Don't be a kill-joy," urged the man. "We'll have a mighty good time. Terry Westmore and Jack Barrett will be along. You've heard of them?"

"I can't go," answered Sari. "As you like," he agreed. "I thought you wanted to take a little fling in society." My mistake. Please forgive me."

On Saturday

On Saturday afternoon Jerry and Nelson Hartwell sat in Hartwell's club talking in low tones of Teddy Westmore and Jack Barrett, who were seated on a nearby divan.

"Now, Jerry, don't fly off the handle. Of course, I hadn't any intention of taking Sari on a week-end party. Do Jack and Teddy look as if they were going any place. I wanted to find out just what price Miss Sari would pay for a social atmosphere. Fact is, old man, I saw clearly that first day when you came to me that you were head over heels in love with the girl.

"Tell you what I'll do. I'll make you the attorney for the firm, get you into my clubs and help you out generally. No, it isn't charity. You're a corking good lawyer. I took pains to find that out before I made this proposition."

Jerry thanked him. "I guess I won't have any trouble marrying her now," he admitted, "thanks to you. She called me up a while ago and said that if I still cared for the mid-Victorian type I could come out right away."

Her Own Way, Tale of Young Girl's Struggles

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

WITH a nod she and her escort passed on. Molly looked across the table at Luther and he returned her gaze.

"She will tell Betty she saw you and me together," Helen murmured.

"Betty will understand," the man said, hopefully.

"Luther," Helen begged, "tell Betty how it happened. Tell her tomorrow, before Molly tells her. Explain that you wanted to talk to me of her—and all that."

The man stopped her by a gesture. "There, my dear," he soothed. "Don't worry! I will explain the whole thing to Betty."

But Helen was unhappy conscious that he could not make the jealous girl understand "the whole thing."

Time flies when two people are talking of that which is of interest to them both. So it was with surprise that Helen Gorman heard Luther Willard remark that it was past eleven o'clock.

"I had no idea it was so late," she declared, rising and getting home."

"I will call a taxi," then as said when, having paid the waiter and secured his hat and coat from the boy near the door, he and his companion started to leave the restaurant.

Willard uttered an exclamation as he glanced out into the street. The snow had been falling fast when he and Helen entered this place two hours ago. Now the snow was deep and a high wind was drifting it as it fell. There was not a cab in sight.

"The last taxi that was here had a tough time gettin' away through the storm," the door-man remarked. "If there's any cabs out now, they're busy carrin' folks home from the theatres."

"Wait and I'll see what I can do," Luther advised Helen. "Stay inside until I return."

She waited ten minutes before he came back, flushed from battling with the wind, his coat white with snow.

"I can't find a cab anywhere," he announced.

"Then we'll have to walk," Helen said.

"There seems no other way—yet I'm afraid you'll have an awful time of it. Won't it spoil your clothes to get them wet?"

"No, indeed," she assured him. "I am used to such storms. You forget that I have been in New England through many Winters."

But in spite to her former experiences with snow, Helen found that she had a difficult task ahead of her now.

The wind was bitter and stung her cheeks and blurred her vision. Her suit, while adequate for ordinary weather, was not heavy enough for such cold as this.

Worst of all, she had on light shoes and silk stockings. Her short skirt did not protect her from the wind, and by the time she had waited half a block, her thin shoes were soaked.

"Have you overshoes on?" Luther asked her at the end of five minutes.

"No," she said, "I hardly ever wear them."

"To gods! You'll catch your death of cold! You might have known you could not cross the sidewalk to-night without getting your feet wet."

"It won't hurt me," she declared stoutly.

But it would hurt her pretty shoes, she reflected ruefully. Yet she would not suggest this to her companion.

It was a long walk across town to the Twenty-second street house. When at last they reached their destination, Helen's breath was almost gone and her feet dragged heavily. She did not acknowledge how tired she was.

When she and Luther had thundered up the front steps, she managed to fit her own pretty, perfectly manicured fingers and handed him her latch key.

He inserted it into the lock and turned it, but the door did not open.

"The darned thing must be locked as well as latched," he exclaimed.

And then Helen remembered something that her landlady had told her when she engaged her room here.

And as the girl remembered, she gasped in consternation:

"Oh, what shall I do?" she said to Luther. "I forgot that Mrs. Ovington warned me that she locks the front door every night at twelve. But—surely it can't be twelve yet?"

"It surely can be and is," the man contradicted. "We'll have to ring until some one hears us."

Advice to the Lovelorn

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Looking for Trouble

DEAR MISS FAIRFOX:

I met a young man about three months ago and have been going out with him constantly. He used to come to my house to take me out about four or five times during the week. I learned to love him very much and think—in fact, am sure that he loves me just as much. The other night he asked me to marry him. I told my parents and they got very angry, as he is not rich. I told him what they said and he said that as long as we loved each other nothing else matters. The other night he came around to see me, but I met him down stairs. My mother found out that I saw him and waited until I got home that evening. My father came down when we got home and I told my friend to go home if he valued his life. I got a good scolding from my parents and another warning not to see him again.

I am only seventeen and am considered young to get married. People to whom I have told my story say that I don't know what love is and about a year from now I will laugh at myself for ever thinking that I could love him, but I do not believe this.

HELPLESS.

YOUR youth plus your family's objections plus the fact that the boy is hardly in a position to try to sweep you off your feet as he has done, are almost enough to argue finally against this marriage. But further than this—I get a definite impression that you don't really care. You feel a romantic interest in this situation. The boy isn't worth while, my dear. The boy is as much in love with the idea of marriage as with you. Those who tell you that a year from now you'll see things in far different perspective are quite right.

Hints for the Household

The tat of a neck or loin of mutton makes a far lighter and much richer steamed pudding than suet.

* * *

When boiling fish, remove all scum quickly as it rises to the top of the water, as it broadens the flavor of the fish if allowed to remain in the pan.

ONCE TO EVERY MAN

A ROMANCE OF A WEIRD ATTRACTION

By A. Luttrell

"AND that last story reminds me of the strangest case of mistaken identity I have ever known," said Lee Matheson, leaning forward in the animated circle grouped around a log fire.

"How interesting!" cried the lovely Elaine Lawrence, fingering her wedding ring.

"Glad you think so," said Lee, looking straight at her.

"Are you subtly approaching that tale of mistaken identity, Lee?" demanded Matt Wilson, impatiently.

"We were needing a good man, an experienced man, to cover our Middle West territory a year ago last Fall. We were sitting in the Eastern offices talking things over when Bishy, our prize psychologist in the selling game, suddenly appeared and said that he had a new man for us to try out when we needed him.

Never Forget

"I shall never forget my first impression of the man and the curious train of thought the sight of him started. I felt instantly that he was going to touch my personal life, deeply and intimately.

"I had not known the man for a week until I realized that for some reason of his own, and some honest reason, too, he was attempting to blot out his past.

"I cultivated him assiduously, but I never found a clue until one day, as we were going to lunch together, I chanced to meet Bob Thornton, that famous old Yale halfback whom I, as a freshie, had adored.

"As soon as Bob saw my companion he made a rush for him, calling him by the name of the greatest football star this country ever produced, but my friend, suddenly quite white, stepped back a pace and told Bob that he was mistaken.

"I have often been mistaken for him,' was the man after a dramatic silence. Bob did not refer to the likeness again except to say, 'You know, your counterpart married the loveliest girl I ever knew.'

"Well, it was about six months after that I heard that my newfound friend was dying in a local hospital, some acute turn of an old trouble that had bothered him for years. I went at once to see him. 'I have some things in a grip downstairs in the office,' he told me. 'When the end comes, please see that all the papers are destroyed, everything.'

"Whatever it was he was trying to live down, he was game about it. 'I have no relatives,' he said weakly. 'The next day I went back to carry out his request, for the grim old reaper had used his scythe in the night. The bag was full of papers carrying the name of Bob Thornton's old football friend, and here was the picture of a woman—'

"What was she like?" asked Elaine Lawrence suddenly. She was leaning forward, staring at him with widened eyes.

"I burned it without looking," answered Lee quietly. "It had wanted me to know about her he would have told me, and yet, yet—somehow—I've always thought that some day that woman's life and mine would touch—perhaps closely."

Late at Night

It was late that night when, the storm past, Elaine and Lee sat on the porch steps watching a gorgeous yellow moon swing slowly up the velvet sky that she turned to him, a question on her lips. "What was the name of the man, the name on the papers in the bag?"

"I've never mentioned it before," began Lee hesitatingly.

"But I have to know—I must know."

Suddenly Lee caught her arm, fairly clenching it in his excitement. "It was Lawrence—the same as yours—Willoughby Lawrence. Elaine, it is possible—is that why you have never said yes—to me?"

"He was my husband," she sobbed, hugging his outflung arms. "What a cruel thing life can be!" Then she looked up, smiling into his anxious eyes. "But now it is little gesture of surrender. "Oh, Lee," she whispered, "be good to me!"

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

—By B. C. Forbes—

Have you ever noticed that most big men have hobbies in which they make their mark?

* * *

I have just been visiting the hobby of F. Wayland Ayer, the veteran founder of N. W. Ayer & Son, of Philadelphia, whose name is synonymous with advertising. Mr. Ayer's hobby takes the form of a composite dairy farm for up-State in New York, where he owns some 700 pure-bred Jersey cattle, including several national champions worth from $10,000 to $15,000 each. Mr. Ayer has two huge creameries, making and selling as much as 150,000 pounds of milk a day. Some of the leading hotels in New York, Atlantic City and elsewhere are supplied exclusively by his famous Meridale brand. He also manufactures milk powder on quite a scale.

* * *

Some of his thoroughbred horses are as notable as his cows. Some idea of the extent of his hobby will be gathered from the fact that it involves a turnover of from three million to four million dollars a year. He had one of his annual sales of cattle last month, when 200 head were disposed of at over $1,200. Special trains were needed to bring the buyers. His hobby has developed to such magnitude that every farmer for miles and miles around sends all his milk to the Ayer creameries.

* * *

Mr. Ayer applies just as scientific methods to breeding thoroughbred cattle and making dairy products as he does to forming advertising plans for many of the most notable business enterprises in the United States. His hobby has helped to keep him young. At seventy-three he is as active as he ever was.

Henry Ford recently told a reporter a dramatic story of how he fooled a Wall Street bank representative and then showed him the door. Either Mr. Ford or the interviewer allowed the heat to affect his imagination.

I think I am fairly familiar with the facts. And they bear a very different complexion from that given Mr. Ford's interviewer gave them. The truth, I understand, is that Ford was at one time in a very tight place and that both he and his son Edsel gave serious thought to doing new financing.

Ford didn't like the terms suggested and determined to get along without assistance.

It should be added that he has exhibited a generosity of spirit even in extricating himself from his uncomfortable position, and he is now on Easy street.

What Lord Northcliffe had to say about "publicity" in this country, it was printed in yesterday's column, Ernest L. Mandel, the editor of Magyar Hirlap, of Budapest, a Hungarian Workmen's Journal, writes:

"Some years ago the college of which the writer is a graduate, was conducting a drive for quite a big sum of money. The usual methods were followed: Exclusive committees, dinners, banquets, etc., to inject enthusiasm into the canvassers. A gala luncheon was arranged at the Bellevue-Stratford hotels, at which Mr. Schwab was to be the principal speaker and guest of honor. The luncheon was scheduled to take place at 12:30 p. m. The writer arrived at the hotel at 12:32 and found but one man there. It was Mr. Schwab. The principal, he, began to dash in around 12:35, but the only man who was on time was the biggest of them all, whose time was the most valuable. To me Mr. Schwab's punctuality was an inspiration."

Wall Street not long since was blue with pessimism. It is now beginning to be rosy with optimism. Bonds have already begun to move upward quite impressively and it is accepted as the customary first stage of a "bull" market. Certainly, a great many securities, both stocks and bonds, look extremely cheap at current prices. The drop in call money to 31-4 per cent. at the close of the week has helped the whole list, especially when viewed in conjunction with the rise in the combined Federal Reserve Bank ratio to 72 per cent. The New York bank reserve is above 72 per cent. After allowing 25 per cent against deposits, the reserve of gold against Federal Reserve notes has reached the extraordinary figure of 110 per cent. Such money favorites as these don't there are always enterprising leaders ready to start something.

Those best informed on the Irish negotiations still are hopeful that a way out will be found.

Following the wholesale lay-off of labor, there has lately been a great deal of talking out of electrical and other salaried employees. In many cases reductions in pay have already fallen. Railroads and some very large industrial corporations have reduced salaries all along the line, from the president down. Public utilities have lopped off or reduced the bonuses paid during the period of inflated prices. Many of the reductions which should shortly set in are almost every condition is getting ripe for the return to better times.

CHANDLER BROS. & CO. TO PAY DEBTS IN FULL

Philadelphia, Pa., July 30.—Creditors of Chandler Bros. & Co., for years the firm of brokers which failed Monday last, will be paid dollar for dollar, according to Clay Mc Mechen, president of the firm. Mc Mechen stated of the firm probably will resume its business within two weeks.

Bankruptcy proceedings would seem to involve no room for doubt, but it is understood that there remains a moral obligation which the law cannot erase. We will meet this.

All offices of the firm will be dropped except the Philadelphia and New York offices under which the organization is understood that many banking houses have thrown over the branch offices in other cities

Cotton Market

New York, July 30.—Business was quiet at the opening of the cotton market today, but prices were steady, with the near months at a trifle lower. First prices were 5 to 7 points lower than the close of last week, which was the only other feature and most of the interest was in the notice day, the first day of the September option on Monday. At the end of the first hour prices were 5 to 7 points net lower, with October 19.40, December 19.46, January 19.60, March 19.84, May 19.96 and July 20.00. Cotton futures closed steady at a net advance of 11 to 15 points. Closing prices were: August 19.74 nominal, October 19.44@19.45, November 19.38 nominal, December 19.46@19.60, January 19.60 nominal, February 19.75 nominal, March 19.96 nominal, April 19.96 nominal, May 19.96 bid, July 20 nominal.

ENTERTAINED REAL PRINCESS UNAWARES

Duchess of Operto Washed Dishes Unrecognized in Pennsylvania Town

Boyertown, Pa., July 29—This town has had a real, live Duchess in its midst for a week, and the little divorced international character subject of hundreds of columns of newspaper space—and never knew it.

Because, her very presence here was proof that her fourth romance was the real one and that, though her husband was much older than she, she had found in him the peace needed by a restless heart, and that he had inspired a devotion that lasted after death.

The devotion was proved by her trip all the way from Italy to superintend the manufacture of a casket for her dead husband.

The discovery and humaneness of this Duchess will be a source of talk here for generations, and it will be hard to explain many of those who came in contact with her that her marital adventures have been the talk of fashionable America and Europe for many years past.

Most of all it would be hard to convince Miss Mabel M. Croll, daughter of the owner of the little Union House here, that the quiet, sad-faced, slender woman who helped her with a rather dull and ordinary station and friends last Thursday. She hopes to be able to extend the camp-cover idea to the need for something of the kind is great.

MRS. EMMONS TO AID OTHER VETERANS

Will Open New Tent for Disabled Heroes at Her Crow Point Summer Camp

Another tent for the use of disabled soldiers, sailors or marines, will be opened shortly at the summer camp near Crow Point on the Wampatuck Land, near Hingham, which Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons of Hingham has been completing for two months.

One tent, holding eight men, has been in use for some weeks, but the demand for accommodations at the camp has been so heavy that Mrs. Emmons has decided to raise another.

A council composed of Drs. C. W. Hoyt and John Sweeney, Lieutenant James Ramsay and Charles Everett, is aiding Mrs. Emmons in caring for the disabled service men.

The camp provides bathing and games for the men, as well as reading and other recreation.

Only totally disabled men are admitted to the camp.

Mrs. Emmons has just returned from the week's end at Newport, where she was one of the guests on J. Morgan's yacht Corsair, at the reception given by Mr. Morgan as commodore of the New York Yacht Club to the officers of that organization and friends last Thursday. She hopes to be able to extend the camp-cover idea to the need for something of the kind is great.

5 HELD IN $4,000 SOUTH END RUM RAID

248 Gallons of Alcohol Found in Four Autos Stored in Garage

Five men were held at the East Dedham police station following the seizure of 248 gallons of alcohol valued at $4,000 found in two automobile trucks and two touring cars in a raid on a garage at No. 2 East Springfield street, South End, by the police and federal prohibition officers.

The men are Frank Costello, Bruno Milia, Frank Scalfo, Antonio Palermo and John Bizzo, all of Brooklyn, N. Y. They are being held by the police as suspicious persons until the prohibition officers seek warrants from United States commissioner Hitchcock.

The alcohol was contained in one and half-gallon cans and concealed in false bottoms of the trucks and under the seats of the touring cars.

MALE HELP WANTED

Printers, Attention

ARE there any first-class printers in Boston who are strike weary and would like to work and who would appreciate a good position with a good firm? We employ from five hundred miles away from Boston. This firm is running on open shop and is paying a week. They treat their men fairly and expect the same treatment in return. We have a shop capable of handling the best class of catalogue, book and advertising printing. We have a book bindery in which line had years experience handling large individual runs of catalogues. If you are a reader, who knows the job printing business, from A to Z, and are looking for a more artistic job—compositors and two good pressmen. Also a bindery girl who knows her business. Write us at once and state your entire absolute protection against future discrimination. We will pay railroad fare and living expenses where necessary. There will be no need mixing trouble with your employer or assessments. In addition to wages, we have arranged a bonus system that gives advantages and protection that the union gives them in connection with their regular wages. Reply, giving full particulars and all possible excuse you have for the first letter. Address Z 11, Boston American.
